Successful 'Maiden Voyage' For Blood Bank Bloodmobile

KINGSTON The Ulster County Blood Bank's new bloodmobile recently made its historic first trip a successful one, according to Arthur C. Chipp, president.

For its "maiden voyage" the bloodmobile visited the uptown banking community.

The first stop was the Rondout National Bank, where Albert Teetsel, assistant cashier and main office manager, became the first official donor in the bloodmobile.

Others followed in quick succession, and the quota was reached easily, according to Chipp.

With a turn of the switch and a short drive, the bloodmobile moved on to the parking area of the Heritage Savings Bank, where it remained for three hours, with blood bank donor members coming from four other banks to complete the day's quota.

"Without the bloodmobile's on-site location, this would not have been possible, for to release that many workers from various banks would disrupt their internal operations to a point where it could not just be done," Chipp commented, adding that it took about one-third the usual time off for workers to complete their donations.

According to Chipp, the successful first run of the bloodmobile could not have been completed without the cooperation of the management of the various banks. He also gave special thanks to the following coordinators: Teetsel of the Rondout National Bank; Francis Kugelman Jr. of the Heritage Savings Bank; John Adami and Peter Kowalenko of Ulster Savings Bank; Mrs. Edith Phillips of The Bank; Tom Beckert of Statewide Savings and Loan; and Carmen Castiglione of Hudson Valley Federal Savings. Bankers Trust was held in reserve, Chipp noted.

"With the advent of the Ulster County Blood Bank's bloodmobile, a whole different and efficient service era was put in motion—the benefits will be far-reaching and important to all, the City of Kingston Laboratory, the Benedictine, Kingston and Ellenville Community hospitals, and most importantly, to those who ultimately need this life sustaining service," Chipp concluded.

Mixed Reaction On Pot Plans

By Matt Spireng

KINGSTON

Gov. Hugh L. Carey's somewhat vague proposal to "decriminalize the possession of small amounts of marijuana" has been met with mixed reaction by area law enforcement officials.

While none of those surveyed by the Freeman are in favor of making it legal for individuals to possess small amounts of "pot," most would not object to treating such possession as a violation under the law, rather than a misdemeanor as at present.

A "violation" is not a crime in New York State. It has not yet been made totally clear whether the governor's proposal is to make possession of small amounts of marijuana a violation or totally legal.

The governor has been quoted as saying, "We're not legalizing marijuana"—an implication that he is proposing that possession of small amounts be made a violation. However, the main reason the governor cited for changing the law—"to free prosecutorial and judicial resources to concentrate on crime more harmful to society"—would not be achieved unless possession of small amounts of marijuana were totally legalized, according to area officials.

"Actually, marijuana cases are not what's clogging up the courts," said District Attorney Francis J. Vogt. "We handle them very quickly, usually on a fine basis at present."

Vogt noted that marijuana cases are, in effect, being treated like violations at present, except that those who are convicted wind up with criminal records.

"If we were to arrest every youngster in Ulster County using marijuana now, which is an impossibility, we would probably give 75 per cent of them criminal records," the D.A. said, explaining that while he is opposed to the legalization of marijuana, he is in favor of making possession for individual use a violation.

"A young person should not be penalized with a criminal record for the rest of his life for possession of a very minor amount of pot. But to take it completely off the books—no," commented Senior BCI Investigator Michael Lisman.

However, Lisman cautioned, "No matter how you cut the mustard, the use of marijuana is still the introduction to the narcotic field."

Sheriff Thomas F. Mayone, who is also opposed to total legalization of possession of small amounts of marijuana, suggested that while he would not be opposed to treating first offenses as violations, the second offense should be treated as a misdemeanor.

"But I can see a trend starting to lead to legalization, which I'm against," he said. Lt. Stanley Kowalik, state police zone supervisor, indicated that treating possession of small amounts of marijuana as a violation rather than as a misdemeanor would not make much difference, either in treatment of the cases in court or in unclogging the courts. He is opposed to legalization, however.

Robbing Peter to Pay Paul

FISHKILL, N.Y. (UPI) — Police say it must have been a case of robbing Peter to pay Paul that led a Poughkeepsie woman to the alleged knife-point robbery of a bank here Wednesday.

Joann Burns, 20, held up one bank for $6,083 and then drove to a bank in nearby Poughkeepsie that was threatening to repossess her green Porsche, police said.

They said it was her car, noticed by a civilian near the robbery scene and then spotted outside the second bank, that led to her arrest on a robbery charge.

Police arrested her inside the bank and she surrendered without struggle, they said.

And Baby Makes Five . . . Generations

Baby Lawrence Donald Lohman appears to be a bit camera-shy as he lies in the arms of his great, great grandfather, William Hornbeck, 89, a former diesel engineer for 52 years with Cornell Steam Boat Company. Although Lawrence doesn't know it, his birth on Nov. 15 marked the family's fifth generation. Other family members are the baby's grandmother, Janet Fay Short (L), wife of Donald Short, a Kingston area

Deputy Named in Grand Jury Report

KINGSTON

Ulster County Sheriff's Deputy David B. Kaplan was named in a report handed up Wednesday by the October term grand jury, which recommended that harassment charges be filed against the deputy in a lower court.

The charges stem from an October 24 incident in which it has been alleged that Kaplan, who was off-duty, and an acquaintance, both of whom were riding motorcycles, chased a car driven by William C. Walker, 20, of Palenville. When Walker saw the motorcycles behind him, he reportedly attempted to get them to move back by applying his brakes, and when they did not, he sped off at speeds reaching 100 miles an hour. Walker eventually slowed down, according to reports, and when he went to make a left turn he was involved in a collision with the motorcycle operated by the deputy's acquaintance. Following the crash, Kaplan allegedly demanded to see Walker's license. When Walker reached to get it out of his glove compartment, Kaplan allegedly pulled a gun and made Walker and his wife, who was in the car, get out of the vehicle and either sit or lie down on the pavement.

Kaplan was initially charged with misdemeanor reckless endangerment following the incident on the complaint of Walker.

The grand jury, which heard testimony concerning the incident, recommended that two counts of harassment be filed instead in a lower court. Harassment is a violation under state law, and does not result in a criminal record on the person charged.

The charges stemming from the incident, which occurred in the Town of Saugerties, will apparently be heard in Saugerties Town Court.

Sheriff Thomas F. Mayone

said Wednesday that Kaplan will be suspended with pay pending the outcome of court proceedings.

Mayone said previously, following the filing of the reckless endangerment charge, that he felt the deputy had "reasonable cause for pulling his gun." He said however, that he did not condone the deputy's action in chasing the car on his private vehicle.

Kaplan has served as a jail guard since being hired in May.

Meanwhile, in other grand jury matters:

Mary Ann Longtoe, 28, of 367 Hasbrouck Avenue, Kingston, was indicted on a charge of first degree criminal solicitation, a felony. She was arrested Oct. 17 by Ulster County sheriff's deputies on a charge of conspiracy to commit murder after allegedly attempting to hire an unidentified man to kill a relative in order to collect life insurance.

The conspiracy to commit murder charge was reduced to criminal solicitation charge following a preliminary hearing in October after it was found by the district attorney's office that there was insufficient evidence to warrant the more serious charge.

Veto Fight on Tax Bill

WASHINGTON — A veto fight between President Ford and Congress now will determine whether income taxes will rise early next year.

The groundwork was laid Wednesday when the Senate Finance Committee, with support from two of its seven Republicans, rejected Ford's call for a ceiling on federal spending. The committee then approved a six-month extension of 1975's lower tax rates.

Mediators on Hijacked Train

BEILEN, The Netherlands — Mediators boarded a hijacked train today at the request of South Moluccan gunmen who have been holding 29 hostages aboard for 10 days.

In Amsterdam an official said new contacts with another band holding about 25 prisoners in the Indonesian consulate were looking "not unfavorable."

Four South Moluccan community leaders boarded the hijacked train early this afternoon to talk to the gunmen for the first time in three days.

'Inexcusable' CIA Plot

WASHINGTON — Calling CIA plots to assassinate some foreign leaders "inexcusable and unauthorized activities," a high ranking Kennedy and Johnson administration official has told Congress some future covert actions might be necessary to check international terrorism and avoid nuclear danger.

McGeorge Bundy, former presidential adviser on national security, now head of the Ford Foundation, also told the House intelligence committee Wednesday sharp cuts in the CIA covert branch would improve its efficiency.

Leftists Advance in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Leftist militiamen, shrugging off a newly arranged cease-fire, seized three strategic hotels today in a thundering assault on right-wing forces and Lebanese army troops.

Bolstered by the capture of two armored cars from the Lebanese army, the leftists showed the rightists and commandos back along the Beirut seafont — scene of the worst fighting in Lebanon's eight-month civil war.

At least 250 persons have been killed and 600 wounded in three days of nonstop street fighting. The latest casualties brought the total death toll since April to nearly 5,000, with 11,000 persons injured.

CBS Gyp Is Nabbed

NEW ORLEANS — FBI agents have arrested an escaped convict who allegedly gyped the CBS television network out of $10,000 by promising to lead cameramen to the body of former Teamster boss James R. Hoffa.

Clarence N. Medlin, who claimed he was a former Hoffa bodyguard, was arrested without resistance Wednesday at a downtown motel. He was held without bail for return to a federal "halfway house" in Greensboro, N.C., where he had been serving a 10-year sentence for interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle.

CBS said the 49-year-old Medlin, who served time in prison with Hoffa in Lewisburg, Pa., claimed Hoffa was taken to Florida following his abduction July 30.

Spain Hit by Strike

MADRID, Spain — Thousands of industrial workers went on strike today to demand speedy political reforms and a general amnesty for political prisoners.

The action came as Prime minister Carlos Arias Navarro put the finishing touches on a new, more liberal cabinet.

Police cleared the halls of Madrid's Chrysler auto plant where 10,000 workers either failed to turn up for work or refused to man the assembly lines.

Marlow Hearing

BOICEVILLE

Dr. Frank Marlow has been granted a hearing before the Ontario Board of Education in the third week of January, 1976.

While final logistical details have not been concluded, it is anticipated the hearing on seven charges of administrative misfeasance will begin anywhere from 5 to 7:30 p.m., will be held at one of the Boiceville schools, and may take more than one session (they are tentatively scheduled to finish at 11 p.m.).

Both the board of education and Dr. Marlow reportedly are in agreement that the hearing be open to the public. Neither the education law nor Dr. Marlow's contract specify whether such a hearing must be public or private, according to one source.

The hearing itself will be conducted pretty much like a trial, with opening statements by attorneys for the board and for Dr. Marlow and numerous witnesses expected to testify on specific charges.

While Dr. Marlow's attorney Joseph Hill reportedly requested that the State Department of Education send a hearing officer to make recommendations, the board did not concur.

Support Welfare Cuts

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Republican legislative leaders, while rejecting most of Gov. Hugh L. Carey's proposals to close a hotly disputed $1.6 billion budget gap, have given tacit support to Carey's call for $140 million in welfare cuts.

In a presentation Wednesday designed to refute Carey's claim that large-scale cuts and $805 million in new taxes are needed over the next 15 months, the GOP leaders included the welfare cuts in their proposal.

Senate Majority Leader Warren M. Anderson, cautioning that Republicans were "not necessarily accepting the details" of Carey's proposed welfare cuts, said he "would lean more toward" the cuts proposed by Sen. William T. Smith, R-Big Flats, chairman of the Senate Social Services Committee.

However, a number of Carey's proposals were similar to Smith's.

"Even if you took the governor's horror story" of the mammoth deficit, Anderson said, cuts in welfare and other areas would help to make any tax increases unnecessary.

Anderson and Assembly Minority Leader Perry B. Duryea said cuts of $140 million in welfare, $60 million in other local assistance, $150 million in capital construction and $250 million in state operations could be used to close the gap. However, they offered no details of their proposals.

In addition to his welfare cuts, Carey Tuesday proposed $457 million in other budget-trimming.

Top Carey aides Wednesday outlined details of the governor's welfare cuts, emphasizing that localities would save an identical $140 million.

"There are 58 local social services districts in the state which are in terrible trouble," Social Services Commissioner Stephen Berger said. "There is enormous support for the governor's program out in the state."

Chief among Carey's cuts was $86 million from Medicaid, including $53 million to be saved by imposing limits on hospital, nursing home and clinic rates and limiting the length of stay of many patients.

Berger and Health Commissioner Robert Whalen said the current practice of allowing such institutions to recover their costs plus a profit in Medicaid payments gave the facilities no incentive to become more efficient.

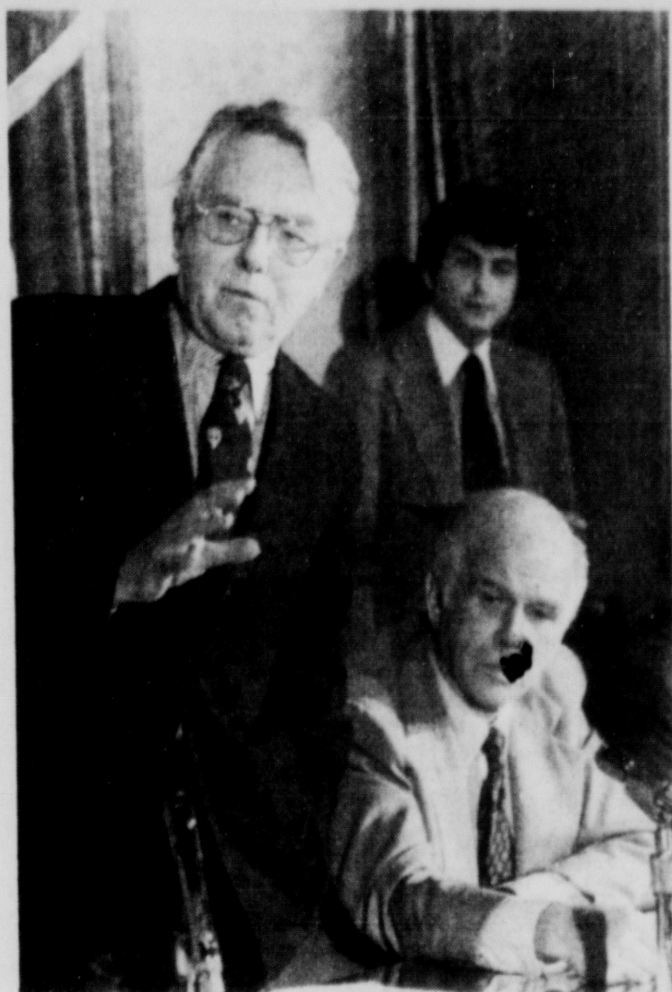

However, the Hospital Association of New York State responded that the "proposed reductions could probably not be absorbed" by many hospitals.

"In New York State, the length of stay per patient is 9.8 days as opposed to 7.8 days nationwide," Whalen said, adding that daily costs for a patient averaged $140 in the state, compared to $113 nationally.

Another $11 million would be saved by cutting optional Medicaid services, such as podiatry, non-emergency adult dental care and some x-rays. Smith had recommended just such eliminations.

Even with the cuts, "We will still have the most elaborate Medicaid program of any state in the union," said Dr. Kevin Cahill, an advisor to the governor on health matters.

Other cuts, such as closing "about 3,000 excess" hospital beds by Whalen, were expected to save another $15 million. The health commissioner said, "An empty bed is like a vacuum — it will attract a patient."

Closing the Door

GOP legislative leaders, Warren Anderson, Senate Majority leader and Perry Duryea, Assembly Minority leader met with press Wednesday to announce the closing of the door on new taxes requested by Gov. Hugh Carey until 1976 regular lawmaking session, and propose a no-tax plan to close balance the state budget. (UPI)

'Instant Plan'

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Gov. Hugh L. Carey's "instant" lottery proposal is designed to answer critics of both the game's operation and its purpose.

Carey's legislation revamping of the lottery, disclosed Wednesday, would specifically earmark all profits from the game for special education.

It would also abolish the current lottery, shut down since Oct. 22, and create a new Division of the Lottery under the Department of Taxation and Finance.

When originally established in 1967, supporters claimed the game would bring in $300 million in increased funds for education each year.

However, lottery profits never exceeded $53.3 million a year, and the money has traditionally been ploughed back into the state's general fund. Backers maintain that if those funds were not there, that amount of education aid would not be available.

Carey estimated the new lottery would bring in about $70 million a year in state revenues, all of which would be earmarked specifically for special education.

A spokesman said the new game, if approved by the emergency session of the legislature, would not be in operation for at least two months. He said unfinished drawings in the old lottery would be completed by the end of the year.

Carey fired Lottery Director Jerry Bruno Nov. 28 and transferred or dismissed the lottery's 317 other employees in a thorough sweep-out of the agency.

An outside consulting agency had found "needless opportunities for fraud," lax security and "a variety of problems of a very serious nature" in the lottery.

Carey ordered the lottery suspended Oct. 22 after duplicate tickets were printed for at least one drawing.

Bruno, a former campaign advance man for Carey, claimed that he was being "sacrificed" while the state Racing and Wagering Board, overseeing the lottery, was actually responsible for most of the game's problems.

In a letter to the governor, Bruno called for an investigation of Racing and wagering, but a spokesman said Carey had no comment on the matter.

State Comptroller Arthur Levitt, in an audit of the troubled department, had pointed to the computer section of the Racing and Wagering Board as one of the problem areas, and called for more independence for the lottery director.

Under Carey's bill, the lottery would use the computers of the Tax Department, and the director would be given more independence.

State Taxes . . . A High Stakes Game

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Gov. Hugh L. Carey and Republican legislative leaders are locked in a high stakes game of tug-of-war over the issue of new state taxes. Caught in the middle is the fate of the Housing Finance Agency and a handful of other "moral obligation" agencies.

The HFA faces default Monday on $143 million in notes unless the money is found to satisfy its creditors. The Dormitory Agency needs $22 million before the end of the month and other agencies have smaller obligations.

Meanwhile, the on-again, off-again emergency session of the legislature was not expected to be called back into operation until Friday at the earliest.

Carey is trying to drag Republicans into the tax issue by insisting that the HFA's borrowing problems can only be solved as part of the state's own budget and credit difficulties.

On Wednesday, Carey produced a New York banker to endorse his plan of taxes and state spending cuts to close the disputed state budget gap.

Senate Majority Leader Warren M. Anderson and Assembly Minority Leader Perry B. Duryea held a news conference to announce an alternative no-tax budget balancing plan that would spread a state deficit — whatever size is finally agreed upon — over the next three years.

The banker, Elmor C. Patterson of Morgan Guaranty, said restoration of the state's credit depended on a balanced budget.

"The balance must be achieved," he said, "with a mix of increased revenues and reduced expenditures."

However, the impact of his statement was diluted somewhat when he admitted to reporters that he had not seen the Republicans' no-tax solution.

Carey also spent part of the day in Washington appealing to Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns for some sort of short-term help in averting an agency default.

"Dr. Burns only said that he would agree to study the problem," Carey said on his return to the Capitol.

Although a spokesman for Anderson admitted privately that the senator might eventually agree to a much-scaled-down tax program if it were linked inextricably with the agency problem, the GOP appeared ready to hold out on the tax issue until after Carey presents his 1976-77 budget in late January.

With Carey's proposed spending document in hand, the Republican strategy goes, legislative leaders would have a stronger hand in reducing state spending, which is beginning to appear as the only certainty in a rather muddled and partisan budget dispute.

The Republican plan called for holding state expenditures through April 1978 below revenues expected from the current tax structure.

By contrast, Carey's 15-month plan proposed spending $10.9 billion next year, an increase of $300 million over current expenditures.

Carey said the new taxes would be necessary to avoid drastic cuts in state operations and the firing of 10,000 state employees. The GOP proposed spreading the deficit over the next three years, providing enough time for growth in the existing tax structure to take care of the shortage.

Both plans called for approximately $600 million in state spending cuts next year, which would translate into the loss of 6,000 to 8,000 state jobs — Carey says through attrition.

Duryea estimated approval of the taxes proposed by the Democratic governor "would produce a $1 billion surplus" by the end of the next state year.

"Mr. Carey wants to have a cushion built up," Anderson said. "I think he is looking ahead to 1978" when the governor faces re-election.

Duryea offered an example of how GOP leaders are reading public opinion on the tax issue:

"I'm saying to the harrassed resident of New York just what the harrassed resident of New York has been saying to me," Duryea said. "He wants the state government to face reality as have many other state governments in the country."

"He's saying, 'Don't increase state taxes, let me live a little,'" Duryea said.

Carey said he was asking taxpayers to "shoulder their share of the responsibility in halting the decline into insolvency and in putting the state government back on the solid ground of an honestly balanced budget."

Both Carey and the Republicans called for $140 million in welfare cuts.

Carey also proposed a $92 million reduction in aid to localities and a $110 million cut in school aid.

15-Year-Old Case Nears End

POUGHKEEPSIE

State police in New York and Connecticut hope to clear up two murders from 1960 and 1969 with a case against a 31-year-old Thompson, Conn., man in jail on another charge.

Troopers got murder warrants Wednesday against Richard Delage, whom they believe responsible for a highly publicized slaying 15 years ago just off the heavily traveled Taconic Parkway in Yorktown, Westchester County.

The victim was a 23-year-old North Troy schoolteacher Carol Segretta. Delage was 15 at the time.

Major Philip G. Emden, commander of New York State Police Troop K headquartered in Millbrook, identified the suspect as Delage, presently being held in the Whiting Forensic Institute at Connecticut Valley Hospital, Middletown, Conn., on kidnaping and assault charges on a woman hitchhiker Oct. 3 of this year. He was transferred to the hospital Wednesday from Connecticut's Brooklyn Correctional Center.

Delage is charged in Connecticut with the slaying of Paget Weatherly, 23, a University of Connecticut graduate student found shot to death Nov. 16, 1969.

Both Miss Segretta and Miss Weatherly, a graduate of St. Lawrence University, were killed with a .32 caliber pistol, according to police. Miss Segretta was shot four times in the head and neck, and Miss Weatherly was shot three times in the chest.

The connection came when police questioned Delage following his Connecticut arrest this year. Said Major Emden, Delage "admitted certain facts about the death of the school teacher." Discussions will be held regarding extradition to New York on murder charges.

Emden stated that when Delage allegedly shot Miss Segretta he was 15 days shy of his 16th birthday. In 1960, state law was changed to include 15-year-olds as adults in certain cases when they were convicted of an act punishable by either life imprisonment or death, he he said.

The investigation for 15 years was handled in conjunction with the Westchester County district attorney's office.

Burglary

Kingston police Wednesday night reportedly stopped a burglary in progress at Sears Department Store, Kingston Plaza.

Charged with third degree burglary, third degree grand larceny, and possession of burglars tools was Brian M. Baird, 18, of 168 Harwich Street, Kingston.

Detectives charged that Baird at about 11:30 p.m. forced entry to Sears by breaking the glass in a rear door with a crow bar and attempted to flee with 11 leather coats from the men's shop valued at $1,067. He was reportedly arrested on the premises by Detective Sgt. Ellsworth, and was scheduled for a City Court appearance today.

Beacon Fire

Four Beacon firemen were knocked down by a falling ceiling at the Penn Central Railroad station early Thursday morning while battling a blaze, but none were hurt seriously.

According to Fire Chief Dennis Leahy of this Dutchess County city, a storage room in a brick building facing the river was totally gutted by fire. He had "no idea" of the fire's cause. It took firemen from 4 to 6 a.m. to quell the blaze.

Leahy said four firemen were knocked down when they entered the storage room as the entire ceiling collapsed on them. Two were taken to the hospital for X-rays, complaining of back and neck pains.

Brown, Dr. Reppert Named

By Jon Powers

GREENWOOD LAKE

Robert T. Brown, president of Ulster County Community College, and Dr. Edmund H. Reppert, former president of the Ulster County Medical Society, have been named to the 30-member Board of Directors of the Hudson Valley Health Systems Agency (HSA).

The appointments were announced Wednesday by Peter J. Savago, chairman of the Ulster County Legislature, at the final meeting of the HSA Task Force at the Sterling Forest Conference Center in Southern Orange County. Leaders of the other six counties that comprise Hudson Valley HSA also announced their appointments to the board on Wednesday.

HSA, mandated by the 1974 federal Health Planning and Resources Development Act, will be responsible for guiding the expenditures of all federal funds in the areas of public health and mental health services, including construction of new facilities and the implementation of new programs in the seven-county area.

The Board of Directors will be the governing body for Hudson Valley HSA. Each county is represented on the board, with counties with the largest population having the greatest representation.

Ulster County will have three seats on the Board of Directors. Savago said Wednesday that he will announce his third appointment shortly.

In addition to the regularly appointed county representatives, there will be four at-large seats on the board: one representing the New York University Medical College, which has its research facility in Orange County; one representing the regional hospital association; and two one-year seats that will be rotated among the seven counties. Hudson Valley HSA is one of eight such units created in

New York State and 200 created across the country. It duties and powers will include:

- Development of a short and long term plan for health care delivery within the region, and implementation of the plan.

- Make grants and contracts to public, non-profit entities and individuals for health services.

- Review, and approve or disapprove, each proposal for the use of federal funds and mental health and alcohol rehabilitation purposes.

- Review and make recommendations for the need for new institutional health services proposed to be offered or developed in the HSA area.

- Annually recommend projects for the modernization, construction and conversion of medical facilities in the area.

- Administer construction aid to hospitals under the federal Hill-Burton Act. Agencies that currently administer such funding programs will be phased out by June 30, 1976.

The groundwork for implementation of HSA was laid by a Hudson Valley Task Force comprised of representatives from each county. Wednesday's meeting at Sterling Forest marked the dissolution of the task force and the formal creation of the Health Systems Agency.

Two public hearings on HSA will be held before the agency begins its work: Dec. 17 at 8 p.m. at North Junior High School in Newburgh; Dec. 18 at 8 p.m. at the County Center in White Plains.

The participating counties include Ulster, Orange, Rockland, Westchester, Dutchess, Putnam and Sullivan. Northern Dutchess Hospital administrator Michael Mazzarella was among those appointed to the board by Dutchess County Executive William Bartles.

A Christmas Reminder

Just two weeks before Christmas
And all through the mall,
Hardly a shopper remembered
Yule precautions at all.

He said a well-practiced thief
So cunning and deft,
Broke into the car
And stole every gift.

Packages were stacked
In the car with such care,
It was hard to believe
They wouldn't be there.

More rapid than eagles
My curses they came,
And I ranted and yelled
To the thief hurled a name.

The children were home
And safe in their beds,
With visions of new toys
Filling their heads.

The policeman was helpful
And sympathized some,
But noted I erred
In what I had done.

Ma with her gift wraps
And I with the sack,
Had just begun talking
Of the car drive back.

The presents had lain
In wide-open view,
And the doors were unlocked
That's another don't do.

When out in the lot
There arose such a clatter,
We raced to the car
To see what was the matter.

Each year the police
They warn to take heed,
I had ignored them
Full of trust and Godspeed.

Blue lights on the breast
Of the new fallen snow,
Gave the impression of trouble
To objects below.

The boxes and bags
Go well out of sight,
The car should be locked
And parked near a light.

When what should our wondering
Eyes there espy,
But an empty back seat
And a policeman nearby.

The policeman exclaimed
As he drove out of sight,
"A Merry Christmas to all
If you just play it right."

City and Assessments

Editor, The Freeman:

When a baseball or a football team loses 87 decisions in a row, this can be likened to the City of Kingston's latest loss in assessed valuations necessitating the issuance of a 10-year bond close to $630,000. There is an indication from the corporation counsel that there are tremendous amounts of further amounts to be paid of certiorari that if judgments are decided against the City, as they have been in the past, will result in further loss of revenue.

In the past these reductions have always favored those protesting, rendered by judges that have been making decisions from their desks and never inspecting the properties involved. The New York State Assessors Manual sets forth the following basic approaches to valuation of real property:

- (1) Capitalization of income.
- (2) Comparative sales and other market indicators.
- (3) Replacement cost methods.

What is value?

The present worth of all rights for future benefits arriving from the ownership of properties. There is a large variety of terms devised to limit the meaning of value to the particular field of interest being served. Such terms as fair, actual, market, liquidation, book, going concern, economic reproduction, taxable value, and many others are in common usage. The existence of all these descriptive adjectives of value should be sufficient indication of the necessity for understanding the particular sense that "value" has in the field of property assessment is really an exchange value present under ideal conditions — a value which would be the same in all cases under identical circumstances and at the same time. The most incongruous decisions in my opinion as a former Assessor was a repayment of $585,000 to the Hudson Cement Company. The assessment which we levied on them and which has been protested by Hudson Cement is not enough, and the City can produce a valuation that will more than justify a greater levy and that together with Mr. Donnaruma's expert opinion rendered when I was in office will bear this out.

When I requested the State Board of Equalization, of Assessments to make up their evaluation of the plant, excluding personal property, they were denied admission to the plant by the management. The Kingston Plaza was assessed by an expert, and they received a fair assessment. Both Hillcrest Gardens and Parkview Terrace requested reductions verbally when I was Assessor, and I asked of them a listing of the leases and a financial statement. This was never supplied to me. And furthermore, the property of 62-68 Ten Broeck Avenue is boarded up. However, if efforts have been made to sell or rent the building, there is no justification for a reduction of $15,300.

My suggestion is that appeals to the courts for a review of all of these malcontents requests for a reduction and a request at the same time for a review of all of these malcontents requests for a review by the State Board of Equalization and Assessments. There is a rule of thumb that for every $40,000 loss of assessments it results in a one dollar increase in the tax rate. Since Ulster County has to absorb losses of $10,000 and over in assessments and refund 15 per cent of that amount to the City of Kingston plus 3 per cent interest, their refunds would seriously affect both city and county taxes for 1976. It is essential that the city protest most vigorously these abstruse decisions, and it would seem to me the City of Kingston never wins certiorari proceedings, and the decisions by the courts are egregious. However, in New York City the certiorari decisions are evenly divided that is for and against the City of New York. There is no fairness in the rendered judges decisions in the City of Kingston, since we have never won an award in the city's favor.

This is not a succinct report, but the expressions of an opinion of an irate taxpayer.

Editor, The Freeman:

This letter is written in reply to C.W. Laurito, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Galitzky, and Miss Jill Robinson of the S.P.C.A.

The S.P.C.A. drew first blood on Oct. 12, 1975 on the front page of the Daily Freeman about Archers. The facts were misquoted then and now on Dec. 2 a letter to the Editor from Jill Robinson and Mary Russell admits the figure of 8,000 animals per year was incorrect.

I wonder if putting in a new well, rewiring the building, digging up concrete floors and replacing them to insure proper drainage and putting on a new roof would cost anywhere near $150,000. If the S.P.C.A. members named above would be more factual the public and myself just might understand their problem.

I am wondering if C.W. Laurito, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Galitzky, and Miss Jill Robinson ever heard the saying the girls who cried wolves and there were no wolves and then when there was a wolf, nobody believed them any more.

Sportingly yours

Present for C-H

Editor, The Freeman:

Once again, Christmas came a few weeks earlier for Central Hudson.

Last year, on Dec. 1, this private utility was given a $12,177,000 rate increase. Last week, the Public Service Commission (PSC or Private Santa Claus) gave them a Christmas gift of a $3,255,000 rate increase, despite the admission by Central Hudson that they had received a $5,000,000 income tax refund a few months after last year's Christmas present.

Can you picture a forthcoming TV commercial: "Who needs the PSC?" asks the announcer. "We do," shout a handful of privately owned utilities, waving their income tax refund checks.

Maybe that will be followed by another TV commercial: "Who needs the PSC?" asks the announcer. "WE DON'T!" shout millions of voters waving their empty wallets.

Yours truly,

Yale Finds Inflation

By William F. Buckley Jr.

Mr. Kingman Brewster, the President of Yale University, found himself safely in England the other day, out of range of the KIDS' DEWLINE which, round the clock, catches orthodox blips from educational officials and launches deadly missiles against the offenders. Accordingly Mr. Brewster talked to the English Speaking Union in London about problems which, up until now, have been associated in the public mind as problems only the troglodytes worry about. Such problems as overspending, the shortage of capital, the heavy cost of bureaucracy, and, above all, the irresponsibility of Congress.

It is sobering to contemplate that not one of the politicians — or professors — President Brewster is normally linked with could have guessed, reading this speech, who delivered it.

Mr. Brewster said that "The inflationary bias of representative government seems to me the greatest threat to the survival of a democratic political economy." That statement is worthy of having been written by, well, myself.

"We need," said the President of the University that teaches its students for the most part to scoff at the dangers of inflation and to support such massive increases in state welfarism as were most recently championed by George McGovern, "some higher law to restrain the natural temptation of use the spending power for political self-perpetuation. If we do not solve this problem, representative government will drive us up to altitudes of inflation which, like anoxia above 14,000 feet, will not be able to sustain productive economic life."

Then came the clincher. "Until we can devise ways by which the inflationary consequence of a Congressman's vote is traced to him with the same particularity which attaches to a yea or nay on a revenue bill, we will not cure the disease of public spending motivated by the desire to achieve re-election."

Medical Advances Could Mean Pain

WASHINGTON — The Medical Scandal for the month of December is the announcement of a high correlation between taking estrogen hormones and getting cancer of the uterus. An estimated 25 million prescriptions for this stuff are written by doctors who can't be sued for killing and injuring the women they've sickened.

Prescribing estrogen hormones for menopause isn't malpractice. It's ethical practice, and, if you happen to come down with what are ghoulishly called side effects, tough on you, sister, we'll cut your uterus out. You're over the hill and into menopause so what do you need it for, and, while we've got you open, we might as well grab an appendix and a couple of other minor organs. Three-for-one bargain days in surgery.

This estrogen hormone business is especially frightening and infuriating because it is being administered to women who may be suffering from a doctor-invented, fictional disease. The suspicion is abroad that the syndrome doctors associate with menopause may more accurately reflect their own opinion of women than anything real troubling their patients.

Preemptive Surgery

The more advanced thinkers in the profession have dispensed with the need to invent a disorder before strapping their patients on an operating table. Physicians exist who now recommend the ovaries be cut out and breasts be chopped off of teen-aged women simply on the basis that a number of their nearest female relatives have come down with cancer of these organs. Preemptive surgery. Surprise attack on cancer. Hit it while its bombers are still on the ground.

Professor Ernest van den Haag of New York has advanced the novel notion which, if explored, might provide such countervailing pressures as Mr. Brewster calls for. The President should "refuse" to borrow the money needed to pay for deficit federal programs. As things generally go, Congress passes a tax bill which will bring in Revenue X. Then it passes a spending bill which authorizes Expenditure Y. Y is almost always larger than X. The President has the authority to borrow, through the Federal Reserve system, the differential.

What if he would refuse?

Congress would have to permit the Executive to trim expenditures. Or else it would have to order the President to borrow, bringing on more inflation. In doing so, it would become far more exposed than it is now. Individual inflationists might then be traceable with that requisite "particularity" proposed by Kingman Brewster.

No doubt there are other means. Since we are to have highly elaborated Election Laws, perhaps, picking up the theme of consumer protection, we should require all candidates to list after their names the percentage over revenue for which they voted appropriations, so that for instance, one would routinely refer to "Mrs. Bella Abzug (D-N.Y.-50): meaning that she had voted to spend half again as much money as she voted to tax.

Meanwhile, the sunburst of Mr. Brewster lights the skies, and we pray that having discovered the light, he will one day soon discover the truth.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

House Panel Bugged By USSR Device

By Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — A miniature electronic "bug," which dropped from a slit cut in the lining of a chair in a House hearing room, has been traced by the FBI to the Soviet Union.

The tiny listening device was discovered in 1973 in the ornate sanctum of the House International Relations Committee. The battery was dead, but it could have been operating during delicate discussions of the SALT disarmament talks, military aid and the Vietnam withdrawal.

Chairman Thomas Morgan, D-Pa., immediately dispatched the mysterious device to the FBI for study. FBI experts painstakingly disassembled the tiny parts and traced them to their country of origin.

The batteries clearly had been purchased in Great Britain. But the experts discovered telltale marks which convinced them the device was made in Russia. They even tried to trace the metallic and crystal parts to the Soviet Union mines where they were mined.

The FBI was unable to determine, however, who had actually planted the tiny microtransmitter. But the G-men reported to Morgan that the bug definitely was an espionage device.

As a result, Morgan urged House Speaker Carl Albert to take extraordinary steps to debug three other supersensitive hearing rooms used by the Appropriations, Armed Services and Joint Atomic Energy committees.

To give the FBI more maneuverability to locate the culprits and to avoid upsetting the Soviet-U.S. detente, no public mention was made of the espionage device's Soviet link. The story has been suppressed until now.

Footnote: Chairman Morgan would confirm only that the bug contained "no U.S. parts," was "dead" upon discovery but, for months, could have picked up anything that was said in the hearing room.

PEOPLE POISONING: Federal officials have sidetracked an alarming study, which warns that lead from auto emissions probably damages the blood and nervous systems of young children.

The concealment of the report occurred at the same time that the nation's foremost producer of leaded gasoline, Ethyl, is suing in the federal appeals court to curtail the government's powers to restrict lead emissions.

This makes the secretiveness all the more dangerous, because the study by the prestigious Center for Disease and Control could be crucial to the court case.

The center, which is part of the Health, Education and Welfare Department, warns that children exposed to concentrated auto exhaust are highly vulnerable to the lead smog.

The "lead is very likely a contributing cause of damage to the neurologic and psychologic development of children," declares the report. The lead spray from auto exhausts also poisons red blood cells, slows nerve reaction, causes "muscular weakness," reduces IQ and causes "poor school performance (and) behavioral hyperactivity."

Yet instead of taking immediate action to save the health of the endangered children, the federal authorities deliberately dillydallied. The financial interest of the gasoline producers, in other words, was put ahead of the welfare of the children.

The center's director, Dr. David Sencer, wanted to alert the Environmental Protection Agency at once last June. The EPA has the power to force producers to reduce the lead in gasoline.

Of course, this resulted in a delay which was equivalent to giving the leadmakers a new lease on poisoning children, as events have shown. For the first committee referred the report to a second "lead subcommittee."

The subcommittee chairman was none other than Dr. Lloyd Tepper, an associate food and drug commissioner, who once did paid consulting for the lead industry. He also played the principal role in preparing a study that soft-pedaled the poisonous effects of airborne lead.

Tepper vehemently defended his fair-mindedness and declared it was correct to withhold the disturbing study from EPA. His subcommittee report, he promised, will be pushed expeditiously.

But meanwhile, the buildup of lead in children's bodies has continued for almost six months since the center tried to alert the EPA.

Footnote: The Public Interest Campaign, a consumer group dealing with airborne lead, has called for Tepper to step down as chairman of the lead subcommittee.

CORRECTION: In reporting the cost of new uniforms that the Marine Corps is testing, we misunderstood the figures which a spokesman gave us. We understood each uniform cost between $728 to $1,326, which would add up to a total of $27,000.

The Marine Corps now points out that the $1,326 purchased 13 Suralene uniforms and the $728 bought seven gabardine uniforms. With a few extras, the total expenditure was $2277.

We are happy to correct the figures.

Terrorism In Israel... Murder: The Neighbor Next Door

By Phyllis and Herb Kamm

(Third in a series)

METULLA, Israel (NEA) — What is it like to live with murder as your "neighbor," as it is for thousands of families in Israel who have taken up homes within shouting — and shooting — distance of Arab borders?

Suppose you are an American who pulled up roots and made Israel your home.

What is it like?

Let two young transplanted Americans tell you.

Even while the streets of Beirut, Lebanon, 50 miles northwest of this village, are exploding with internecine warfare, Palestinian terrorists continue their incursions across the border into Israel.

The danger is always there. The sublimated fear lurks in the shadows of the mind, like the terrorists slinking into the darkness of the nearby orchards hoping to strike at the villagers.

"I don't want to say it's something you get used to. But it's not the uppermost thing in everybody's minds. You know, everybody sort of lives their lives. When I go up to the orchards I'm on the road next to the border fence. I take a firearm with me. Maybe the chances are one in a million something might happen. But if there is that chance, you take the gun."

Sandy-haired Eric Jacobs, 29, soft-spoken, pragmatic, B.A. in philosophy, born and raised in Boulder, Colo. with little Jewish training and no Zionist inclinations, shrugged, accepting the reality facing his family and their neighbors in Metulla. Metulla is an agricultural village of a few hundred families, the northernmost point of Israel nestled against the Lebanese border.

His dark-haired wife Rivka, 30, chubby, pleasant faced, M. in English literature, comes from a traditional Jewish home in Utica, N.Y. They met as students at the University of Rochester. They now live with their two small children in a snug little home some 100 yards from the border of Lebanon, beyond which Arab terrorists wait for the chance to strike.

Eric and Rivka spoke to us in their den. It is a booklined room, comfortable, cozy. But there are no windows and the outer walls are encased in eight inches of concrete — an extra inch or so more on the roof.

This is the security room, a part of every house near the border of an Arab country. It is the room where the children sleep and where Rivka joins them to comfort them and allay their fears on nights when Eric is on border patrol and there is a terrorist alert, or the boom of Israeli artillery is frighteningly amplified by the surrounding hills of Lebanon and Israel. It is a room built to withstand shelling from across the border.

The young mother was asked about the psychological impact on the constant tension on the children, Yael, 4, a snub-nosed, pigtailed shy little girl, and Joshua, 5, alert and eager.

"If you raise your children in a dangerous city, they've got in some way to have some fear of people, or some fear of being alone or walking by themselves," said Rivka. "Our kids' fears are not any deep psychological thing. They know what they're afraid of. When the shooting starts they're afraid and that's all there is to it."

"And we do the best we can to cope with it. I think it's bad psychology to grab your kids and run. I think it's a bad education for the children and I think it's silly. Our approach is to try to make them accept it and get used to it. But of course you never get used to it."

But they do accept it and often laugh about it. When we asked how the alert is sounded, Rivka chuckled and said the neighbors get out and yell as loud as they can. "Hey, Eric, Eric." You can see it's a very sophisticated system. And one night when terrorists were nearby, a member of the patrol called reassuringly to her neighbor: "Don't worry, Ora. It's only terrorists."

And little Joshua haltingly recalls, with wide eyes, the night a Katusha (Russian-made) rocket fell in the town. He tries to tell the story but never finishes. The wide blue eyes finish it for him.

Like their neighbors — some newcomers like themselves, others third and fourth generations in Metulla — the Jacobs are always mindful of the dangers but there is a healthy, lightheartedness about their lives as Israelis, an eagerness to face the challenges head on.

They enjoy their jobs as teachers and fruit farmers. Eric works at a high school in Kiryat Shmona nine miles away, the target of a terrorist attack last year. Rivka teaches at a grade school in a village close by. They are infused with a sense of participation in a vital society.

They have their comfortable, modern home purchased at a minimal cost under the program for new settlers. They also have 10 dunams (2.5 acres) of apple, plum and peach orchards that were planted by the Jewish Agency which sends someone to guide the tyro farmers, who would never get this type of opportunity in the States.

This is the Jacobs' fourth year in Metulla, their seventh in Israel. It is the first year their orchards produced a salable crop — 20 tons of fruit. Eventually these 2.5 acres will be capable of producing 75 to 100 tons of fruit a year.

They came because one very cold January morning in upstate New York Eric asked Rivka: "What the hell are we doing here?" They had more or less mapped out their lives to get PhDs, to be teachers, to buy a house, etc., etc. "We looked at each other," Eric told us, "and decided we didn't want it."

It's obvious they found what they want — or almost. They hope that some day, for both Arab and Jew, the border will be open and free as it was from the earliest settlement in 1896 until the 1967 war, when relationships were good, when farmers on both sides of the border exchanged agricultural know how and family chit-chat in each other's homes.

SIEGEL, SHUSTER AND THE MAN

(UPI)

A Job for Superman

NEW YORK (UPI) — The creators of "Superman" — two elderly men struggling for a living — say they don't like the offer of a "pension-type stipend" from the current owners of the rights to the "Man of Steel."

Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster, both 61, have been offered $15,000 a year each for life by Warner Communications, Inc., but they said Tuesday they want compensation equal to the average wage of working cartoonists, about $25,000 annually.

Siegel and Shuster said they signed away their rights to royalties on Superman for $65 apiece in 1938.

Siegel, now unemployed and blind in one eye, lives alone in an apartment in New York and is supported by his brother. Shuster lives with his wife and daughter in West Los Angeles and makes $7,000 a year as a clerk-typist for the state.

"Joe and I have gone through a terrible ordeal," Siegel said. "Several times we have been close to suicide."

New York Daily News sports cartoonist Bill Gallo, president of the National Cartoonists Society, told a news conference Tuesday, "We are shocked that the proprietors of Superman refuse to share a fair part of the millions Siegel and Shuster's creation have spawned."

Jay Emmet, a Warner vice president, said the firm bought the rights to Superman in 1970. He said Shuster and Siegel have until today to accept the company's offer.

"We have no legal obligation," Emmet said, "but certainly we feel that from a moral point of view we should do something and we have worked out a pension-type plan."

But Shuster and Siegel, besides asking for the larger sum, also said they want some guarantees for their families after they die.

They said they thought up the character of Superman in 1933 after watching a movie starring Douglas Fairbanks Sr. — but it took five years to peddle the idea of "Clark Kent . . . the mild-mannered reporter . . . who fights a never-ending battle for Truth, Justice and the American Way."

They finally signed a contract with Action Comics in 1938.

"They said they would take good care of us. We trusted and relied on them," Shuster said.

The two men said they earned about $400,000 between 1938 and 1948 from the Superman character, primarily from newspaper syndication. Shuster said they never made a dime from the television series, movies, toys and T-shirts based on their brainchild.

LONDON (UPI) — Spurned by his mother and stepfather in Israel, a 12-year-old English boy returned to Britain today for adoption by an uncle.

Lee Borrett, 12, had plaintively asked, "Why does nobody want me?" when he was left to fend for himself in a strange country before he finally found someone to take him in.

The brown-eyed youngster got a lift on the flight to London from actor Chaim Topol of "Fiddler on the roof" fame, who talked to him and cracked jokes as part of the VIP treatment to try to cheer him up.

The uncle, truck driver Christopher McArdle, was at Heathrow airport to meet the boy. He said he would adopt him if that was the only solution, as it appeared to be.

Borrett had arrived in Israel Sunday to be reunited with his mother, who had remarried there. His father left her before he was born. The boy had been living with his grandmother.

But the reception in Israel was cold and prompted the boy to ask, "Why does nobody want me?"

His stepfather, engineer David Bromand, 39, met him at Israel's Lod airport, pushed some money down his shirt and, according to witnesses, said "I don't want you. I'm not interested in you."

The boy's mother, Angela, said "he has got to go home. He must go back. My husband will not allow Lee to stay here. He is not Lee's father and he wants him to finish his education in England."

The grandmother had paid the one-way ticket to Israel because the boy pined for his mother. A ground hostess for El Al Airlines took him in until his return to Britain.

The uncle said: "I am deeply shocked about this situation. Lee is a most lovable boy and we had no idea that he was going to be rejected."

McArdle sent a telegram to El Al Airlines from his home in England Tuesday saying he would be willing to accept the boy and would not put him in an orphanage.

For Lee, it's been a bewildering three days. "Why does nobody want me?" the newspaper Ha'aretz quoted Lee as saying.

British Vice Consul Jean Murdock managed to contact Lee's mother — whose name was not released — and spent four hours convincing her to see her son.

The unwanted boy and the reluctant mother met at the airport Tuesday and spent the night together at a Tel Aviv hotel.

A reporter who witnessed the reunion said the mother's first words were, "Hi, Lee. You look nice. How are you?"

Lee, looking down, replied, "Hi, Mum." The woman — at tall, slender blue-eyed blonde — put on sunglasses to hide the tears.

Bikini Thesis Rejected

BEAUMONT, Tex. (UPI) — A coed's master's thesis which included a photo of her sighting celestial bodies while wearing a bikini has been rejected a second time.

University officials complained that the picture showed too much of her own body.

Lamar University math major Kathryn King was told to remove the photo of herself the first time she submitted the paper to department heads.

She has refused, saying the picture of her demonstrating a sextant was too important to delete and her thesis was rejected for the second time Tuesday.

"I have met all scientifically sound objections," Miss King said. "But I have refused to substitute another photograph for the one in which I am wearing a bathing suit while engaged in celestial observatory work."

"This is supposed to be a university and not a Victorian finishing school. If the photo-

Letters to Santa

HELSINKI, Finland (UPI) — The world's children are writing to Santa Claus in record numbers this year, and 19 of his helpers are working overtime to make sure each letter is answered.

Although the children know they must be good to receive presents from Santa, the letter from Augi Cassidy of St. Joseph, Mo., summed up the situation. "I know I have been pretty bad at times, but I wish I could have a few things," she wrote.

Michael Sutton of East Morsey, England, added an enticement for Santa's visit. "I will leave you a glass of gin and some chocolate," he wrote.

The letters were among thousands received from around the world. Many post offices that receive mail addressed to Santa Claus at the North Pole, Reindeer Land or other exotic places send the letters to Finland.

The Helsinki Post Office gives them to the Finnish Tourist Board, which has produced a letter with Santa's own handwriting, pictures of him and a puzzle on the reverse side.

Santa's letter concludes, "Together with all my Christmas elves, I wish you and your friends and family a really good and merry Christmas. Santa also hopes that the gay and friendly spirit of Christmas will continue long after Christmas as well — right up to the following Christmas."

The tourist board estimates it will answer at least 30,000 letters this year, with about half coming from Finland. About 1,500 letters arrive daily and 10,000 have already been answered.

Last year the board replied to 10,000 foreign letters.

Bad Manners, But Very Smart Politics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It is not hard to figure out what Gov. George Wallace was up to when he delivered a colossal snub to his colleagues of the Democratic Governors Conference earlier this month. He was using them in his presidential campaign.

Wallace, along with nine other announced candidates for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, accepted an invitation to appear before the governors at their winter meeting Dec. 2. Everyone showed up except Wallace.

Had the Alabama governor made a diplomatic excuse when he was invited or even as late as the day of the conference, little could be made of his non-appearance. Like any candidate, he has the right to campaign in his own way and under conditions he believes best for himself.

But Wallace flew all the way from Montgomery to Washington in time for lunch with the governors the day of the conference and then failed to show up for the candidate forum four hours later with the explanation that he was "preoccupied" at his hotel on state business.

It would be difficult to construe Wallace's refusal to appear before his colleagues as anything but a deliberate act of nose thumbing. And it is not hard to guess why the Alabamian did it.

Wallace, like Ronald Reagan, is running for president as an antipolitical. His campaign strategy is to sell the idea that he is different from the stereotype politician who talks "down home" to the voters and then forgets all about them when he wins the election.

The candidate, even when he already holds public office, does everything he can to identify himself with the beleaguered citizen in a "them against us" view of the world.

This approach used to be surefire politics in rural areas, but today's more sophisticated voter needs to see more than the candidate in his shirtsleeves to believe he is different from the rest.

Wallace's performance at the governor's conference was a real life demonstration that he cares nothing for the approval of the political establishment.

By making clear that he could be at the conference and then refusing to come, Wallace simply dramatized his independence from what Reagan calls the political "buddy system."

The interesting part of the episode is the fact that while Wallace snubbed the governors, he had another reason for coming to Washington that made the trip worthwhile to him.

The day after his appearance at the candidate's forum, he was scheduled to participate in a private luncheon with a select group of reporters and confer with the editorial board of a national newsmagazine in Washington.

All that indicates is that while Wallace feels he can get along just fine without the goodwill of his fellow politicians, he still sees some value in courting the establishment press.

Which in turn demonstrates another axiom of old fashioned politics: write whatever you want about me, but spell my name right.

Godfrey Knew Something Was Wrong

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) Actor and comedian Godfrey Cambridge knew something was wrong when his foot went through the living room floor of his $125,000 home.

Cambridge became more than concerned when he peeked through the rotting floor and found that his just-purchased Ridgefield home did not have the full basement as advertised.

Now, 13 months after he moved his family from New York City to the "peace and quiet" of western Connecticut, Cambridge's complaints that the house was a lemon have been partially upheld by the state Real Estate Commission.

The three agents involved in the sale of the 15-room house to the black entertainer say they will appeal license suspensions ordered after the commission ruled they misrepresented the condition of the house.

The ruling came after four days of hearings last summer that erupted at times into shouted accusations between the real estate agents, their lawyers and Cambridge's outspoken wife, Audrey.

"I'm happy with the decision, but I wish it were longer," Cambridge said of the suspensions.

"It's the first time I've ever come up with a victory," said Cambridge, who figures he has spent almost as much to repair the house as it cost originally. "But I don't feel like riding off like a cowboy into the sunset," he said.

Cambridge who earlier complained of vandalism and threats to his wife and two teenage daughters, said some of the problems he found in the home were leaking toilets and sinks and broken appliances.

He said some of the repair expenses have gone for "luxuries such as heat and water."

However, the commission held the agents responsible for only two items in his long list of complaints. They were claims that the house had all hardwood floors and a full basement.

Cambridge said he found the living room had plywood floors when he fell through a rotted portion as he and his wife surveyed the view from a large window shortly after they moved in. He said much of the basement has merely crawl space.

The four days of hearings that included dozens of witnesses and thousands of pages of documents and testimony, were the longest in the commission's history.

The commission suspended for 60 days the license of Richard D. Walter, the manager of the Ridgefield office of American Realty Co.

The license of the owner of the firm, Joseph H. Belin, and a former agent of the firm, Norma E. Forcelli, were suspended for 30 days. The firm's license was also suspended for 30 days.

D&H Canal . . . 'An Object of Historic Curiosity'

NEW PALTZ

The first million dollar privately owned enterprise in the United States, once vitally important to the economy of a portion of New York State and Pennsylvania, is today an object of curiosity for history buffs.

The story of the Delaware and Hudson Canal, which ran from Honesdale, Pa., to Kingston, N.Y., has been captured in a new film, produced by the State University College at New Paltz. It will have its public premiere Sunday, Dec. 14, at McKenna Theatre at the college. The film will be shown at 3, 4 and 5 p.m. Admission is free and tickets are not required.

When the War of 1812 cut off the supply of British soft coal which was used for fuel by the young industries on the east coast, brothers Maurice and William Wurtz, who owned land rich in anthracite coal, determined that the construction of a canal was the most viable means of transporting it from their Pennsylvania mines to the Hudson River and then to New York.

"Canaler" is a chronicle of that canal from the time of its inception until the last coal boat reached tidewater. It encompasses the engineering genius of its construction, its significance in the economic growth of the United States, and the day-to-day lives of the canaler and his family.

The film was produced by the Center for Instructional Resources (CIR) at the college with the collaboration of the history department. The late Manville Wakefield, historian of Sullivan County, was one of the major resources in writing and script.

John Price and Betty

Spencer of CIR wrote and produced the film. Leo Spies, New Paltz director of photography, shot the live scenes of what is left of the canal and transferred to film many still pictures which appear.

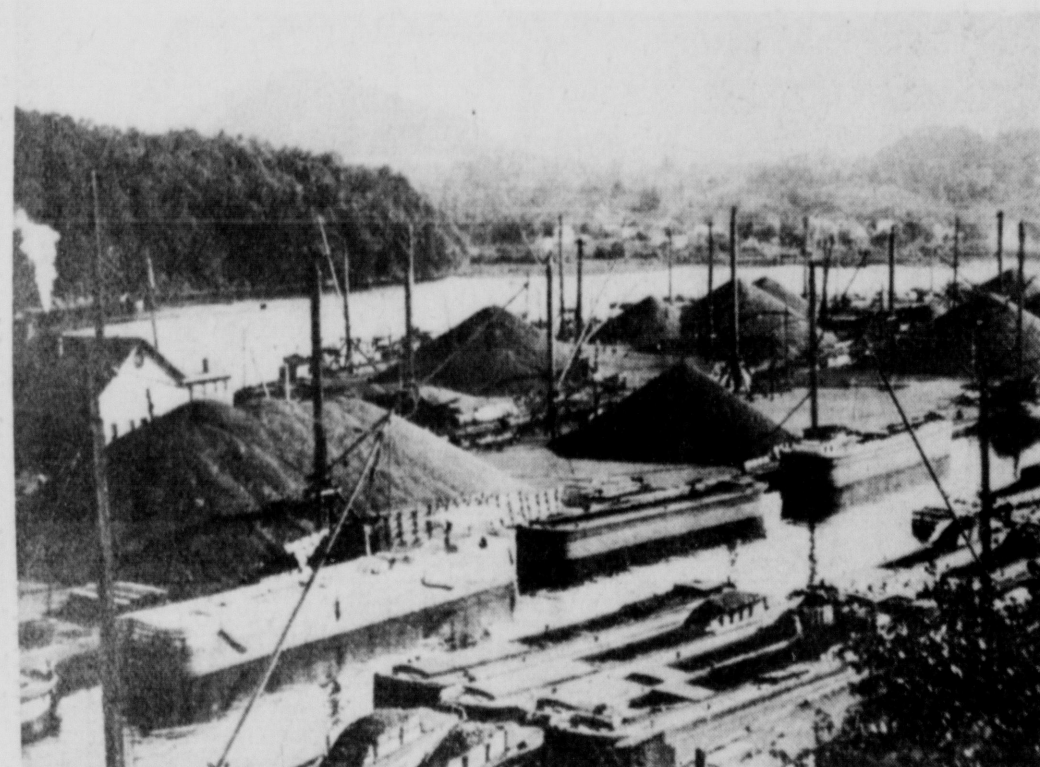

Pictures were found in private collections, museums, historical societies, in the archives of the D&H Railroad, and in a mural in the Honesdale motel. Much of the research was done by Alan Johnson, a New Paltz history student, who spent part of his senior year on an internship devoted to the project.

Dr. John M. Sherwig, New Paltz history chairman, said his department collaborated in the production because "we are interested in exploiting the study of local history and the canal was one of the most significant institutions in this region in the 19th century."

Bicentennial Flavor in '76

Pageant Moving to Kingston

KINGSTON The Miss Ulster County Scholarship Pageant will undoubtedly take on a bicentennial flavor in its 1976 presentation.

For in 1976 the pageant will be held in Kingston, the first capital of New York State.

After being held in Saugerties for several years and in Lake Katrine last year at the M. Clifford Miller Junior High School, the 1976 pageant site of Kingston will be another fitting tribute to the area's bicentennial celebration.

Announcement of the Kingston selection has been made known by George Leombruno, the Miss Ulster County Pageant executive director.

Leombruno said the 1976 pageant will be held at the J. Watson Bailey Junior High School auditorium. Miss Sharon Schneck of Palenville, the current Miss Ulster County, will crown the winner at the April 3, 1976, festivities at the Bailey School.

The pageant executive director also has announced that Sharon Daley will serve in the capacity as entries committee chairperson for the 1976 scholarship pageant. Assisting her will be Sheila Markle and

Ellen Palmer as well as two former county titleholders — Frances Tomshaw, Miss Ulster

County of 1973 and Debbie Buchan, the 1974 winner.

Ms. Daley noted that any unmarried young woman who resides, attends school or is employed in Ulster or Greene Counties, is eligible to enter the competition for the 1976 crown. Miss Ulster County of 1976 will compete for the crown of Miss New York State as well as additional scholarships.

The Miss America preliminary had been conducted as the Miss Ulster County Pageant in Saugerties since 1966. Prior to 1966, when Pamela Davis was crowned, the event was called the "Miss Saugerties Pageant" and was founded by the Saugerties Area Chamber of Commerce in 1956.

These contests were still staged in the Saugerties area until 1975 when the pageant was shifted to Lake Katrine.

The latest shift from Lake Katrine to Kingston will offer Kingstonians and Ulster County residents another great opportunity to view the talent of the various contestants as well as participate in another salute to the 200th birthday of our nation.

Past winners of both the Miss Saugerties and Miss Ulster County pageants have been:

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a 28-year-old woman I'll call "Terry." I am 31.

Terry and I have been going together for eight months. She claims to love me, but here's the problem: I want to marry her, but she says, "I don't want marriage."

Abby, can that be? Doesn't every woman want marriage? We started living together as an experiment. It has worked out very well for both of us, so why shouldn't marriage work out?

Terry says, "Marriage will OBLIGATE us to live together. This way, we stay together because we choose to."

Maybe I'm old-fashioned, but I want the security of knowing that we belong to each other legally.

Terry says a marriage certificate is just a piece of paper, which doesn't mean anything because if the marriage doesn't work out, it can be exchanged for another piece of paper that will dissolve it.

How can I get her to marry me?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD: You can't. And it's just as well, because while you may love each other, your ideologies are worlds apart.

DEAR ABBY: When our child started walking, we bought a harness for him. We use it to protect him in large crowds, unfamiliar surroundings and busy streets.

At first I felt hurt and even thought perhaps I was wrong when strangers would say, "What do you think he is — a dog?" Or, "That poor little thing. How can you do that to him?"

Now I am just plain angry!

Would those critics rather that our child be lost, be run over or fall down a flight of stairs? His harness has saved him from all these things.

Our child is now 2, and we will dispose of his harness soon, but until we do, I wish strangers would think twice before they make such unkind remarks.

INDIGNANT MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Perhaps if they thought twice, they wouldn't make any unkind remarks at all.

DEAR ABBY: I believe I read in your column that there is something a person can take to keep from crying at a wedding.

Please find out what it is and tell me. I am to be a mother of the bride, and I just know I am going to cry all over the place at my daughter's wedding, and I look terrible when I cry. My eyes get red and my nose runs and I sob and shake all over.

I even got emotional yesterday when I opened the closet door and saw my daughter's wedding dress hanging there! Please, please help me. (I cried so hard just writing this I had to re-address the envelope.)

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Call your family doctor and ask him to prescribe something for your nerves. There are many such tranquilizers on the market.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you gave some excellent advice to a woman who was in love with a married man. I clipped it and kept it. It's still good and ought to be repeated at least once a year. Here it is:

"Any woman who accepts the attentions of a married man, no matter how lonely, misunderstood or henpecked he claims to be, is cruel, inconsiderate, stupid and short-sighted."

KINGSTON

"Joy for Christmas" will be the theme for the Kingston Rhinebeck Council of the Christian Business and Professional Women's dinner meeting scheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 16, at 6:30 p.m. at Holiday Inn. Each lady is invited to bring a guest, male or female.

Mrs. Osgood, the former Joan Timpson, will be guest singer for the evening, bringing guests "Sounds of Christmas." A Kingston High School graduate, she is a former voice student of Leonard Stine.

"Crafts for Christmas" will be presented by Barbara Epstein of Card 'n Party. A galaxy of ideas for holiday gifts and decorations will be offered.

Reservations may be made by contacting Linda Duspiva of Hurley or Helen Christensen of Tillsen. Deadline is Dec. 13.

Liberal Republicans Facing Disaster Year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the liberal wing of the Republican party, the 200th year of the republic threatens to be a political disaster.

Already a minority within a minority, there appears to be no role for them in the 1976 presidential campaign.

They are faced — as of now — with the prospect of having to go into battle against the Democrats following the banner of a conservative candidate.

To them, Gerald R. Ford or Ronald Reagan is a tasteless choice.

Grudgingly and without any great enthusiasm, they will support Ford but only because — above all — they want to stop Reagan.

It is Reagan's candidacy which already has sent distress pains shooting through the so-called East Coast liberal wing of the party.

Not only is there a distinct possibility that Reagan could upset Ford and win the nomination but his entry into the presidential primaries has forced Ford to shift to the right.

The liberals cannot field a candidate — even if they had a credible one — because to do so could only undercut Ford's strength and enhance Reagan's candidacy.

When Sen. Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland started rumblings about going into the primaries to offset Reagan and leave Ford as the centrist candidate, he was quickly put down by by fellow liberals in the Senate.

Now Mathias contents himself with thoughts of an independent candidacy should both major political parties nominate candidates with a "strong ideological cast."

Reagan, of course, would fit that description as would a number of Democrats.

But a Mathias candidacy — independent or third-party — besides admittedly being something of an impossibility next year would hardly cause a ripple among the electorate.

The frustration of the liberals was harshly voiced by Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois who had liberal visions of his own. He abandoned those when Ford decided to seek a full term in his own right.

As with all GOP liberals, the goal now is to stop Reagan. Percy said he would "vigorously oppose" the former California governor.

He said the GOP "simply cannot afford to nominate someone as far out of the centrist mainstream as Gov. Reagan. To nominate him in Kansas City next August would be as politically foolhardy as the Democrats' nomination of Sen. McGovern proved to be in 1972."

"Indeed, I believe a Reagan nomination, and the crushing defeat likely to follow, could signal the beginning of the end for our party as an effective force in American political life."

Percy also warned Ford "not to match the Reagan rhetoric or — worse yet — to act on it. If the President wins the nomination by out-Reaganing Reagan, it will cost him the election, and that will serve neither our party nor his own conservative philosophy."

With the election less than a year away, the Republican liberals are in the unhappy position of having no candidate of their own and being limited to support one conservative — Ford — to stop another — Reagan.

It is a grim prospect for the wing of his party which in the past won the nominations for the likes of Thomas E. Dewey of New York, stopped the GOP's "Mr Conservative" Robert Taft with Dwight D. Eisenhower, and could always rely on Nelson Rockefeller to provide an alternative.

No Excalibur Myth for Democrats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the legend of Arthur, the true king proves his worthiness by extracting the great sword Excalibur from solid rock. The wishful hope of Democrats for a reenactment of that myth in 1975 has been dashed.

In the past year, 10 Democrats have declared themselves candidates for the 1976 presidential nomination. At least three others may yet enter the race, depending on events between the beginning of delegate selection next month and the start of the Democratic national convention July 12 at Madison Square Garden.

This is an untidy and confusing situation for the party. Despite the adoption of detailed rules that are supposed to give everyone a fair chance to win the presidential nomination, there seems to be a strong emotional feeling within the party that the Democrats should already have a frontrunner, a "natural" candidate.

This is the kind of feeling that helped put Sen. Edmund Muskie out front for the 1972 nomination, and despite what happened to him, Democrats have been spending most of this fall seeking a way to cull their herd for a likely winner.

The party's liberal wing, blessed (or cursed) with more people who want to be President than other Democratic factions, was the first to begin the search for a champion. It sponsored five regional forums at which candidates were asked to present themselves to rank and file Democrats for inspection and testing.

Although several candidates seem to have improved their positions as a result of the forums, no single figure emerged as the candidate of the liberals.

Then the Democratic governors decided to try the same system. They called the candidates to their winter conference here last week to talk about issues of importance to the states and to answer questions. Nine of the 10 showed up and the result was the same: the sword remained in the rock.

The governors' forum was the only one at which both middle of the road Democratic candidates — Sens. Henry Jackson of Washington and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas — appeared. Although the governors are supposed to lean toward the right in party affairs, neither senator set the meeting on fire.

Ironically, the result may have been to blur the picture. Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, one of the most liberal governors, said what he got out of the forum was a feeling that both senators are capable and attractive men he would feel politically comfortable with.

And, even though his "New Populism" rhetoric seems far too rich for many of the more conservative governors, former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma got as friendly a reception and as warm a response from the conference as any of the candidates.

The forums did have one constructive result for the Democrats. First, they began the necessary process of getting people interested in the campaign to come. Second, they helped sharpen the issues and cross-fertilize the candidates' positions on national problems.

Examples of the latter were seen when Jackson came up with an idea for increasing federal educational expenditures that was very close to a proposal offered earlier in the year by former Gov. Terry Sanford; Sen. Birch Bayh expressed interest in the "zero base budgeting" espoused by former Gov. Jimmy Carter, and Rep. Morris Udall proposed a comprehensive new transportation trust fund that apparently grew out of Gov. Milton Shapp's plan for a railroad trust fund.

Expect Auto Sales To Improve in '76

DETROIT (UPI) — In the most optimistic prediction yet of the auto industry's recovery from the deepest slump since the Great Depression, General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy today predicted sales would top 10 1/2 million cars in 1976.

The 20 per cent improvement that Murphy is predicting over this year's recession level would put 1976 in the record books as the third best ever. The GM chairman predicted car and truck sales together would be in the area of 13 1/4 million units, also a 20 per cent gain.

In a year-end outlook, the chief executive of the world's largest auto company said two things clouding his outlook are the uncertainties caused by upcoming labor negotiations and the still unresolved conflict with Congress over clean air standards.

Murphy said he expected "sensible solutions" to both problems.

"We are confident that in the government and in the unions there is a high appreciation of the importance of the American automobile industry and a firm determination to maintain its recovery," he said.

The GM chairman renewed his challenge to the United Auto Workers not to seek too much in the way of more time off the job. He said the new contracts must achieve "a realistic balance between productivity and compensation" or the present recovery and the nation's ability to compete in world markets may be impaired.

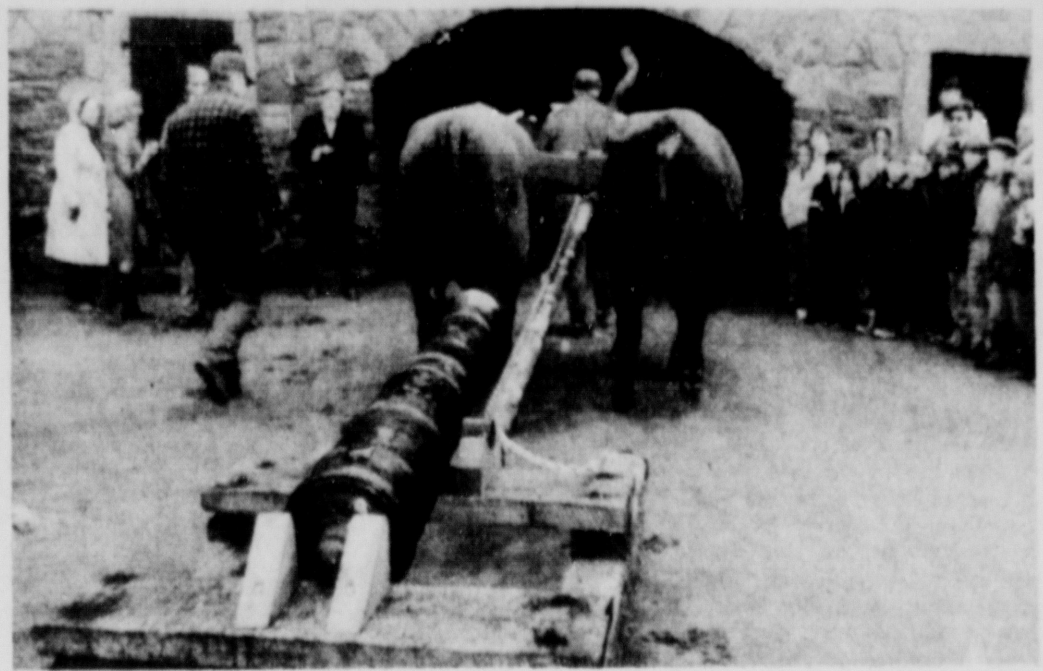

Murphy's optimism was in sharp contrast to the predictions of his main competitor, Henry Ford II of the Ford Motor Co., who says auto sales, including imports, won't get much above 9.5 million in 1976.

This year's estimated 8.6

million sales will be about 7 per cent below 1974 and nearly 25 per cent below the record 1973 level before the start of the Arab oil embargo that triggered the two-year slump. In the first two months of the model year, domestic auto sales scored gains of 23 and 35 per cent over year-ago levels.

Murphy said there was every reason to expect further recovery in 1976 because industrial production is up, employment has increased, consumer income is up and inflationary pressures are moderating.

But he said reducing unemployment will continue to present a major challenge for both government and industry in the year ahead. The four U.S. automakers still list 66,000 workers on indefinite layoff and have seen their blue collar labor force shrink from 732,000 in mid-1973 to 576,000 on the job in December.

Long Trip Begins

The reenactment of the Knox Trek began Wednesday amid a driving rainstorm from famous Ft. Ticonderoga. Behind an ox team the Knox Cannon, the same gun that made the journey 200 years ago, leaves the fort in Ticonderoga, N.Y., heading for Boston. Three sleds hope to retrace the steps of Henry Knox's "impossible journey" when he was in charge of the expedition that brought 60 tons of cannon and ammunition to George Washington at the siege of Boston. 'Protection' For Nessie

LONDON (UPI) — The Loch Ness monster — newly christened Nessiteras Rhombotryx — may win protection as an endangered species even though many scientists don't believe there is such a beast.

A team of scientists that claims to have photographed the elusive prehistoric reptile presented their evidence to critics and supporters Wednesday at a seminar in the House of Commons.

The fuzzy underwater pictures — published in Nature, a leading scientific magazine — showed what appeared to be a creature with a horse-shaped head, a 6-foot flipper or fin and reddish, mottled skin.

David James, a member of the House of Commons and sponsor of the seminar, said other members of Parliament interested in conservation would probably support a plan to protect Scotland's most famous denizen as an endangered species.

Dr. Robert Rines, president of the Academy of Applied Science of Boston, and British naturalist Sir Peter Scott insist their pictures are evidence the lake contains a breeding family of prehistoric reptiles 42 to 62 feet long with diamond-shaped flippers and a small head with "horn-like protuberances."

They suggested the large reptiles might have been landlocked about 12,000 years ago when an arm of the sea was sealed off into a lake as the ice age melted away.

Rines and Scott said the monster should be given a scientific name as the first step in arranging legal protection. They suggested Nessiteras (marvel of Loch Ness) rhombotryx (with diamond-shaped flippers).

But some scientists at the seminar scoffed at Rines' pictures, taken by remotecontrol strobe-light cameras last summer.

Dr. Gordon Shields of the British Museum of Natural History said he thought the controversial fin belonged to a fish and estimates of its 6-foot length "are wildly out."

A group of five scientists from the British Museum issued a statement that said, "None of the photographs is sufficiently informative to establish the existence, much less the identity of a large living animal in the Loch."

Dr. David Davies, Editor of Nature, was careful to point out that publication of the pictures did not mean his magazine supported Rines' theories. The magazine placed the three photographs and two drawings in its "Comment and Opinion" section where writers are free to express their own ideas.

'Holiday Embargo'

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A judge, admitting he might be technically wrong but morally right, will accept no more divorce cases until the day after Christmas.

District Court Judge Raymond Naifeh, who took similar action a year ago, posted a notice to that effect Wednesday on his courtroom doors, noting attorneys had told him two marriages were saved by the Christmas moratorium in 1974.

"If even just one marriage had been saved, it would have been justification for the moratorium," Naifeh said. "But two were saved, and who knows, maybe we will up that score this year."

"God meant for marriage to be sacred, and this holy season will be a good time for couples with marital differences to sit down and talk things over, rather than jump precipitously into what can become an often stormy affair."

'My Voice Must be Heard'

MOSCOW (UPI) — Shouting "my voice must be heard," Nobel Laureate Andrei D. Sakharov tried and failed for the third time today to enter the courtroom where a fellow human rights activist is on trial.

The court declared defendant Sergei Kovalev in contempt and continued his slander trial without him after a bitter exchange over who should be allowed to enter the room at the courthouse in Vilnius, Lithuania.

Sakharov tried to enter the court after a recess, but when vigilantes with red armbands stopped him, he shouted through the open door at the judge: "My voice must be heard in there... I have a right to shout," one witness said.

Communist party stalwarts who form the bulk of the spectators jeered at Sakharov, who was awarded the Nobel prize for peace in his absence in Oslo Wednesday.

"Go back to work," one man shouted.

Kovalev, facing up to 12 years in jail and exile on five counts of anti-Soviet slander, said he would refuse to eat and take any further part in the trial until his friends were admitted.

A witness said the judge ejected Kovalev from the courtroom and continued the trial in his absence after he said, "Since you have got along without a defense lawyer, you can get along without me, too."

The 45-year-old biologist, a member of the Amnesty International human rights organization, is accused of producing illegal news journals, distributing copies of Alexander Solzhenitsyn's "Gulag Archipelago" and slandering the Soviet Union.

NAACP Official Here

KINGSTON Alfred Baker Lewis has been with the NAACP since 1920. He is 78 and appears frail, but his opinions as given recently to reporters in Kingston and to the Bard College Black Students Coalition are anything but frail.

Three topics Lewis chose to address were George Wallace's candidacy for president; an assessment of President Ford; and the need for national health insurance.

The retired insurance man has been on the NAACP board of directors for 17 years and still tours three months a year (at least) for that association. He is a white man, and bears the title "national treasurer emeritus."

•On Wallace — "When Wallace was first elected governor of Alabama it was the Ku Klux Klan support. He did not deny it, and the head of the Klan in Alabama boasted that they gave him his margin of victory." Lewis told of a book by William Huie called "Three Lives for Mississippi" that purports to document that Wallace packed the state parole board when elected to get two Klansmen — sentenced to 21 years in jail — out of prison.

They had been placed there, said Lewis, for castrating a Negro named Edward Arons whom they did not know, saying they just wanted to prove they "were good Klansmen by getting nigger blood on their hands."

Said Lewis, "His candidacy is a political abomination."

•On Ford — Lewis thinks he is "pretty dumb," because he proclaimed former President Nixon's innocence "when everyone else knew that Nixon was guilty"; because he was "then dumb enough to be surprised that there was a cry of outrage from the people and Congress" when Nixon was pardoned; because "he has vetoed every bill passed by Congress for social welfare purposes on the grounds that he does not want the federal budget to have a bigger deficit" when a deficit is "good, not bad, for then some of the unemployed get jobs to produce more goods and furnish more services to meet the increased purchasing power" of the federal government.

Lewis said a deficit will only cause inflation if there is full employment, and he blames current inflation on oil gouging by Arabs and Venezuela.

"President Ford hates the poor," he declared. "He even tried to increase the price of food stamps, although food stamps are necessary to provide a halfway decent diet for the poor." Another reason is "he vetoed a bill to provide more federal funds for education than he asked for, although education is necessary to enable people to get decent jobs . . ." Then he asked for $1.2 billion "for a nuclear powered cruiser above what he had originally asked for in the way of war materials."

•On socializing medicine — Lewis presented numerous favorable arguments, stating, "We need national health insurance because we do not now have good medical care." He said the best test of good medical care is infant mortality and, despite the fact we spend more on medical research than other countries, we are 17th from the lowest on infant mortality. "And every country with lower infant mortality than ours has some form of national health insurance."

Lewis pointed to the fact that we already have a form of government health insurance through workmen's compensation for industrial accidents, although it has no benefit to the person who cannot work.

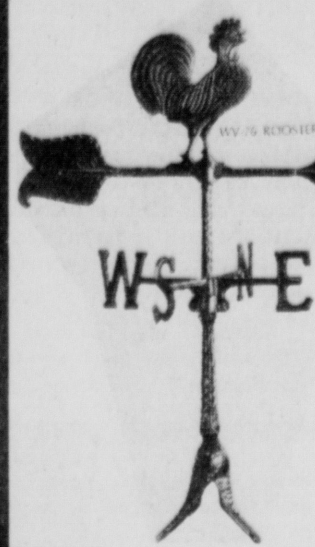

The cost is a specious argument, he said, because "someone in the community pays for ill health," be it a person's employer because of loss of work; his children for lack of money; taxpayers if the person is receiving public assistance; insurance policy holders in premiums. "National health insurance would actually reduce the cost of ill health," he said because too many people who cannot afford expensive doctors postpone a visit until their condition becomes serious. Lewis supports the Kennedy-Corman bill in Congress.

Owners Swallow Pride, Accept Veeck

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — "Look for me under the arc lights, boys," Bill Veeck said upon leaving baseball 14 years ago. "I'll be back."

Today Veeck is back—and at the same address as when he left as chief operating officer of the Chicago White Sox in 1961. But the return of the "Burrhead Barnum" was not without plenty of pitfalls.

Stung by a temporary rebuff a week ago from the American League owners in his bid to buy the White Sox and prevent the team from passing to Seattle interests, Veeck arrived at the winter baseball meetings early Wednesday morning confident he could meet the financial demands imposed upon him.

He did, but in the first vote by the AL owners Veeck fell one short of the nine affirmative votes necessary for approval. The vote was 8-4, three against and one abstention. But Veeck was not finished yet.

Detroit Tigers' owner John Fetzer, admittedly no great fan of Veeck's, recognized the petty prejudices involved in the negative vote and made an impassioned plea to his fellow owners to suck up their pride and take Veeck back.

"A lot of soul-searching has gone into this," Fetzer told the owners. "We have left these people (Veeck's group) over a barrel. We told them to go out and do it (get the necessary financing) and they did it."

"This is no time to be crying over spilled milk. We have to be men about this. I don't like the idea of letting a guy back in here who's called me a son of a bitch over and over again, but, gentlemen, we've got to take another vote."

And so they did, this time voting approval of Veeck by a 10-

2 margin—the only dissenters being Charlie Finley of the Oakland A's and Gene Autry of the California Angels.

"I don't really care about the first round vote," the elated Veeck said after AL President Lee MacPhail officially announced the league approval. "All I care is how it turned out."

SPORTS TODAY

"It's not often that a 61-year-old, one-legged man gets a new start in life."

Although Veeck's success eliminated the problem of the near bankrupt White Sox, it by no means ends the American League's woes. Still pending is a law suit from Seattle civic officials who were deserted by the AL in 1969 when the Pilots will move to Milwaukee.

"That's our next problem," said MacPhail. Reports already were circulating that the AL would try to fend off the Seattle suit by shifting either the Minnesota Twins or Finley's A's to that northwest city.

Meanwhile, National League owners were wrestling with the dilemma of the financially-strapped San Francisco Giants. The NL owners were expected to take over the club from owner Horace Stoneham today and operate it until new owners can be found.

"We can operate it indefinitely," said Los Angeles Dodgers' Board Chairman Walter O'Malley. He didn't mean the Dodgers could, but the National League.

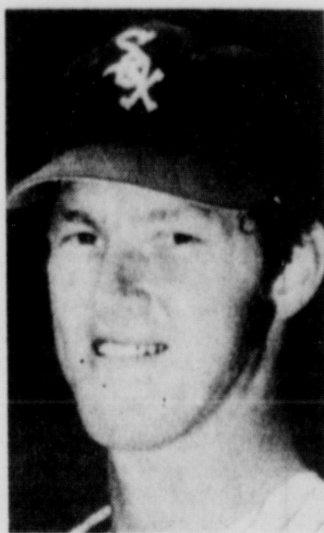

Chisox Deal Kaat to Phils

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — Bill Veeck liked the water just fine, so he jumped right in.

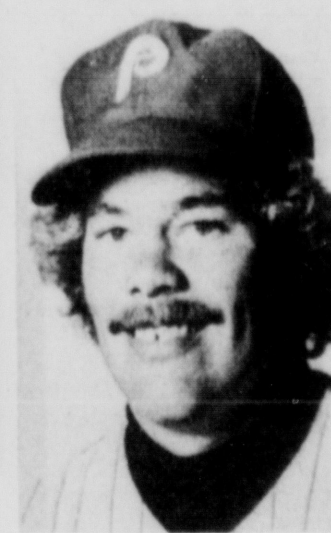

Within the hour after the American League owners approved his purchase of the Chicago White Sox Wednesday night, the club made a five-player deal with the Philadelphia Phillies that included the unloading of veteran left-hander Jim Kaat, a 20-game winner the past two seasons. The White Sox gave up the 37-year-old Kaat and minor league shortstop Mike Buskey for three young Phillies—right-handed pitchers Dick Ruthven and Roy Thomas and infielder-outfielder Alan Bannister.

Earlier in the day, another former 20-game winner was involved in a trade as the Texas Rangers got right-hander Bill Singer from the California Angels for first baseman Jim Spencer and "a substantial sum of cash."

Kaat, who reportedly has been considering retiring, has 235 major league victories, more than any other active pitcher. He was 21-11 in 1974 and 20-14 last season. His best of 17 major league seasons was in 1966 when he was 25-13 for Minnesota.

JIM KATT

DICK RUTHVEN

"We wanted Kaat because we feel he can help us win the pennant next season," said Phils Manager Danny Ozark. "I'm not worried about any talk about his retiring. He's too good an athlete. After two straight 20-win seasons, he should be raring to go."

White Sox General Manager Roland Hemond said he was sorry to give up Kaat. "But we're on a youth movement and those young players we got will help us more over the long run."

Singer, 31, was a 20-game winner with Los Angeles in 1969 and with the Angels in 1973. But last season, plagued by back and elbow problems, he was only 7-15 with a 4.98 earned run average.

"We are gambling that Singer will be the comeback player of the year," said Rangers Manager Frank Lucchesi.

"We don't want to stiff Texas," said California General Manager Harry Dalton. "If it turns out he can't pitch next season, we'll have to work something out with the Rangers."

Spencer, a .266 hitter last year, was with the Angels from 1969 until they traded him to Texas in a five-player deal in May 1973.

"Spencer could be traded," said Dalton. "We've already had several offers for him. But he also could play first base for us next season. His addition gives us greater depth and also opens up an opportunity to put together a package for another trade."

Wednesday's trades brought to 21 the number of players dealt since the annual baseball meetings began here last weekend and 45 since the 1975 season ended.

Rangers Get Closer

The New York Rangers still haven't beaten a team with a winning record this season ... but they're coming a lot closer.

The Rangers fell just 6:59 short of upsetting the Buffalo Sabres Wednesday night, having to settle for a 2-2 tie when Gilbert Perreault blasted a 40-foot slap shot past John Davidson just after the 13-minute mark of the final period.

It was the second time the Rangers and Sabres have played to a tie in less than a week and the one point New York picked up in the standings kept the Rangers in last place of the NHL Patrick Division, two points back of idle Atlanta.

"I'm very deflated," said Davidson, who claimed Perreault's goal hit the inside of his skate before finding its way into the net.

"As long as you have good shots on goal you can't complain," said Ranger Coach Ron Stewart, whose charges peppered Buffalo netminder Gerry Desjardins with 33 shots. Buffalo, on the other hand, drilled 40 at Davidson.

New York jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first period on Walt Tkaczuk's fourth goal of the season but Jacques Richard tied it for Buffalo at 17:56 of the second period. Jerry Holland put New York up by one again with his fourth goal at 8:35 of the third period only to see Perreault tie it a final time with his 15th goal.

The Rangers have won just 11 times in 29 games this season and are the only team in the Patrick Division to give up more goals than they have scored this year.

In other games, Montreal tied Toronto 3-3, Detroit nipped Pittsburgh 3-2, Chicago blasted Washington 7-2, Philadelphia tied California 1-1 and Los Angeles blanked St. Louis 5-0.

In the World Hockey Association, Winnipeg tripped Toronto 6-5, New England dumped Minnesota 3-2, Edmonton clubbed Quebec 7-4 and Indianapolis topped Phoenix 2-1.

Canadiens 3, Maple Leafs 3
Guy Lapointe and Jacques Lemaire tallied third period goals to offset a pair of second period breakaway scores by Toronto's Lanny McDonald and keep Montreal unbeaten at home in 14 games. Toronto's Jim McKenny and Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer traded goals earlier in the contest.

Red Wings 3, Penguins 2

Black Hawks 7, Capitals 2
Dennis Hull scored two goals and set up two others in leading Chicago to a rout over Washington. The Black Hawks led 6-0 at one point but goaltender Tony Esposito lost his shutout bid when Bill Clement scored late in the second period and Jack Lynch added a goal early in the third.

Flyers 1, Golden Seals 1
A power play goal by Rick Hampton in the third period enabled California to tie the Stanley Cup champs in a game which featured outstanding goaltending by Gilles Meloche, who shut out Philadelphia for the final 58 minutes. The only Flyer goal was scored 66 seconds into the game by Bill Barber.

Kings 5, Blues 0
Marcel Dionne scored his second hat trick of the season and goalie Rogie Vachon recorded his third shutout in averaging a 6-0 loss earlier in the season to St. Louis. The sixth three-goal game of Dionne's career gave him 20 for the season and tied him for the league lead with Pittsburgh's Jean Pronovost and Buffalo's Danny Gare.

WHA
Bobby Hull scored a goal just 44 seconds into the overtime period to give Winnipeg its victory over Toronto and keep the Jets undefeated in four overtime games this season ... Tom Webster's 12th goal at 9:25 of the third period pushed New England past Minnesota ... Norm Ullman scored his 500th career goal and Tim Sheehy added four more to direct Edmonton past Quebec ... and Blair McDonald scored a third period goal in his first game with Indianapolis to nudge the Racers past Phoenix.

At Wednesday's session, NL officials voted unanimously to alter the playoff system to a best four-of-seven basis instead of the present best-of-five. That change will be implemented next fall if the AL goes along with it in the joint-session today.

Veeck wasted no time in taking charge. Immediately after his confirmation, he and his general manager, Roland Hemond, swung the first major player deal of the winter meetings, sending 20-game winner Jim Kaat and minor league shortstop Mike Buskey to the Philadelphia Phillies in exchange for outfielder Alan Bannister and right-handed pitchers Dick Ruthven and Roy Thomas.

Veeck pronounced his confidence in Hemond as his general manager but was noticeably restrained in support of Manager Chuck Tanner, whose contract was negotiated under the previous White Sox owner, John Allyn, and runs through 1978.

"He's the manager and he has a contract," Veeck said tersely, thus fueling speculation that Tanner will be let out next week.

Veeck's group, which is made up of 40 investors, including Hall of Famer Hank Greenberg, former St. Louis Browns' owner Bill DeWitt and ex-White Sox Manager Paul Richards, purchased 80 per cent of the Chicago club for $10 million with Allyn retaining the remaining 20 per cent.

Besides his brief three-year stewardship of the White Sox (1969-71), Veeck also operated the Cleveland Indians and the Browns, making few friends among the AL owners with his many publicity stunts.

Like it or not, the AL owners can now expect the resurrection of the irreverence, flamboyance, fireworks and chutzpah that only Bill Veeck could bring to the American pastime.

BILLY MARTIN

KELLY ANN MARTIN

Martin, Lawyer Trade Charges

BARRANQUILLA, Colombia (UPI) — Policarpo Fernandez, the Colombian lawyer who is defending Billy Martin's daughter against cocaine smuggling charges, may have been an admirer of the Yankee manager when he played second base, but he has never liked Martin's big mouth.

Fernandez, who is defending Kelly Ann Martin, 23, against charges she tried to smuggle a pound of cocaine from Colombia to the United States, is upset by what Martin said about him in Hollywood, Fla., while attending the annual winter baseball meetings.

"I'm working on getting her out of there right now," Martin said. "All I know is some lawyer down there is trying to fleece me for an awful lot of money."

"Tell that famous Mr. Martin that I haven't received even a nickel, either in dollars or in Colombian pesos," Fernandez said when he heard of the fleeing charge. He wouldn't disclose his fee, but it is based in part on ability to pay, he added.

"Two weeks ago, he promised he would send me a bank draft but I haven't received a cent and I've been working on the case since last month," Fernandez said. "You don't work for nothing in Colombia or in any other part of the world."

Fernandez said he defends many Americans involved in drug charges in Colombia and only 10 days ago proved the innocence of an elderly Connecticut couple charged with possession of marijuana.

Baseball is the most popular sport along Colombia's Caribbean coast—in contrast to the rest of the country where soccer is the national pastime—and Fernandez, as a good native of Barranquilla, the Caribbean port, has been a baseball fan all his life.

"I admired him when he played second base for the Yankees," Fernandez said, "but he always had a big mouth. Getting into fights with umpires, and now this."

Fernandez said he will nevertheless continue the defense of Miss Martin, who he said is an "honorable, correct sort of person," and he has hopes of proving her innocence. He wouldn't reveal the basis for his defense so as not to tip off the prosecution.

Miss Martin said in a jail interview that she was "tricked" into taking a package to the United States whose contents she ignored. She says she tied the two plastic bags of what turned out to be cocaine to her legs inside her nylons so they wouldn't be stolen.

Colombian police say Miss Martin has refused to tell them who gave her the drugs or to whom she was supposed to deliver them in Miami. She was arrested as she was about to board a plane from Barranquilla to Miami last Nov. 16 and has been in the Barranquilla women's jail since.

The military court which is trying Miss Martin under special state of siege legislation is expected to hand down its verdict in 10 days' time after a summary court-martial, Fernandez said.

If convicted, the minimum penalty for the offense is three years in jail and the maximum is 10 years, according to the lawyer. Deportation follows the release from jail after completion of sentence.

A HAPPY BILL VEECK

Fans Love It

CHICAGO (UPI) — "Dine-oh-mite!" exclaimed 22-year-old Gary Greenbaum.

"Fantastic," said John Wilson. "It's a great win for Chicago," said Mort Sullivan.

They had just been informed that the Chicago White Sox will stay right where they are—on Chicago's South Side—as a result of a vote by American League baseball owners at their winter meetings Wednesday night.

Across the city, fans reacted with glee to the decision to allow a syndicate headed by Bill Veeck to purchase the controlling interest in the club from John Allyn and keep the Sox in Chicago.

"That way we can have a subway series," said Greenbaum, a graduate student in business at the University of Chicago. "I'm not a Sox fan. I'm a Mets fan. But it makes a great deal of difference. Being in Chicago, I want to see more baseball games here. If there's two teams here, you can see more baseball games."

"The owners are also screwed up," he said of an initial vote to reject Veeck's ownership bid, "because the debentures that Veeck had were just as good as preferred stock. If the company liquidates, they're better. But that being unlikely, they're at least as good."

"Veeck's just the man for them," said Wilson, 31, a fifth grade school teacher. "I think Allyn was pretty boring and Veeck will probably do something more dramatic. That has already been more exciting than it's been for the last four years. It's certainly a controversial trade."

Will Parseghian Take Jets' Job?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ara Parseghian could be the New York Jets' head coach next season.

Parseghian, who left Notre Dame last year, has informed the Jets he will let them know either Monday or Tuesday if he is interested in entering negotiations with them for the job, according to the New York Daily News.

The News, in its Thursday edition, said Parseghian has confirmed the contact with the Jets and said he would "make my decision over the weekend."

"I would like to get it out of my mind by Monday or Tuesday," Parseghian said. "The key thing is whether I decide to reenter the game."

He was unavailable for further contact Wednesday night and the Jets refused to comment on the story.

The Jets, now 3-9, fired Charley Winner last month. He was replaced strictly on an interim basis by offensive coordinator Ken Shipp, who lost his first three games before beating New England 30-28 Sunday.

Parseghian announced he was leaving Notre Dame Dec. 15, 1974, but remained on to coach the Irish to a 13-11 upset of Alabama in the Orange Bowl.

"When I resigned last December, I gave myself one full year to decide what I would do and I have programmed myself to that. I will review the whole thing over the weekend with my wife and I will decide whether I want to re-enter the game," the News quoted him as saying. "If I have an interest I will initiate the discussion (with the Jets)."

Parseghian also reportedly has also has been offered the head coaching job of the New Orleans Saints, who also fired their head coach—John North—early this season. Personnel Director Ernie Hefferle is coaching the club, also on an interim basis.

Garrett Fined

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Running back Carl Garrett has been fined $350 and demoted to second string by New York Jets Coach Ken Shipp for missing one day's practice and reporting late for another session.

Steve Davis will start in Garrett's halfback slot against San Diego in Monday night's nationally televised game.

"I'm not cutting Garrett but I'm benching his butt," Shipp said. "That's the only way I've ever coached."

Garrett, acquired from Chicago early this season for Mike Adamle, was fined $250 for missing practice Monday and another $100 for showing up late and missing a meeting Wednesday. Tuesday is a day off for the Jets.

Garrett has a past history of missing practice sessions and it was one of the reasons the New England Patriots dealt him away after he earned Rookie of the Year honors for them in 1969. He once was suspended by the Patriots for missing practice but reinstated by Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Garrett, who earlier this year had some of the same problems with Shipp's predecessor, Charley Winner, said only that he was unable to get from Boston to New York but would not elaborate.

Shipp also indicated he was not pleased with Garrett's blocking.

The Heavyweights

Heavyweight boxers Ron Lyle (L) and George Foreman (R) will meet in a 12-round nationally televised bout Jan. 24 in Las Vegas. With pair is former champ Joe Louis. Story on page 27. (UPI)

SPORT PARADE

Milton Richman,
UPI Sports Editor

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — Bill Veeck had a good day, a very good day. He got his old ballclub back. Billy Martin had a better one. He got his daughter back.

Unbeknownst to all but only a few at the winter baseball meetings here, Billy Martin has been going through unimaginable anguish these past few days because word reached him his 23-year-old daughter, Kelly Ann, had been arrested and jailed in Barranquilla, Colombia, for being found with cocaine in her possession.

She told police she had been "duped." She said she didn't know what was in those plastic packages given to her by a "friend," and she refused to reveal the name of the person who gave her the packages or the individual whom she was instructed to deliver them to in Miami.

Kelly Ann Martin is like her Papa in many ways, but unlike him in one. She's beautiful, a red-haired knockout. She's been living with her mother, Martin's first wife Lois, in California, but has always been close to her father, whom she visits periodically.

The other day, Martin got a call from his business partner, Bob Brown.

"You know your daughter is in jail in Colombia?" Brown said to him.

"You're kidding," replied the New York Yankees' manager. "What's she doing in Colombia?"

Martin thought his daughter was being held in Columbia, S.C., and when he discovered it was Colombia, South America, and she was being charged with drug possession, his first instinct was the same as any father's. He wanted to do anything he possibly could to help his daughter.

"I love her very much," confesses Martin, who also has an 11-year-old son, Billy Joe, by his present wife, Gretchen. "I started wracking my mind. Who do I know? Where can I get help? I didn't know what to do. I thought of calling Henry Kissinger and asking him what to do. Honestly. He's a Yankee fan and I felt he might help me."

Instead of Henry Kissinger, the first one Martin called was Bob Short, his old boss with the Texas Rangers who has helped a great many people in and out of baseball.

"He must have spent two whole days just making phone calls trying to help me out," says Martin. "I'll never forget what he did for me as long as I live. He told me not to get discouraged, he'd do all he could and he did."

Now it came time for Martin to go to the winter baseball meetings. He came here, but his mind was thousands of miles away in Barranquilla, Colombia.

Gabe Paul, the Yankees' president, and the father of a daughter Kelly Ann's age himself was completely understanding. Ordinarily managers take part in trade talks, but Paul told Martin not to worry about that. Instead, Martin spent two and three hours in his hotel room every day merely trying to make a call to Colombia.

"Did you ever try to get through to Barranquilla?" he asked.

That's where some of his friends here helped. Friends who speak Spanish like Camilio Pascual, who used to pitch for Minnesota; Preston Gomez, a former San Diego and Houston manager; and Tony Pacheco, one of the Astros' coaches who managed in Latin America.

"Camilio was going to fly down there strictly on his own just to try to help me out," says Martin. "Imagine that?"

It was Pacheco who brought Martin the good news yesterday, though. He had gotten through to Barranquilla and talked to friends he had there. They knew where to get the right kind of legal help and assured Pacheco that Kelly Ann would be let out of jail within 72 hours.

Billy Martin was so happy he could've sung. It was as if some great weight had been pulled off his chest.

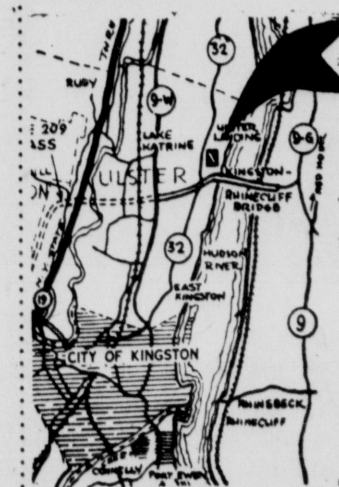

Bill Veeck had a good day but Billy Martin had a better one.

New Playoffs For Baseball?

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — The National League unanimously voted Wednesday to change its playoff system to four games out of seven instead of the present three out of five.

Bill Bartholomay of the Atlanta Braves initiated the proposal but for it to be accepted the American League would have to vote the same way Thursday. If a stalemate develops, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn is empowered to cast the deciding vote.

Memphis May Get NFL Team

MEMPHIS (UPI) — The National Football League expansion committee plans to meet next week to consider awarding a franchise to the Memphis Grizzlies of the old World Football League, the committee chairman has announced.

"The meeting will be a very serious discussion and a top-to-bottom analysis of Memphis," committee chairman Dan Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers, said by telephone from Pittsburgh Wednesday.

Rooney declined to speculate whether a final recommendation is likely at the meeting expected to be held in New York, though a definite date and meeting location had not been chosen Wednesday night.

"I am simply not in a position of saying if we will have a decision or not," he said.

Another member of the four-man committee, Lou Spadia of the San Francisco 49ers, was more specific about possible action on the application by Grizzlies owner John Bassett.

"The reason for the meeting is to make a determination,"

he said by telephone from San Francisco. "It is possible that we could come to a conclusion, but it is just as possible that we will need additional data."

Committee member Gerry Phipps of the Denver Broncos declined comment and Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys could not be reached.

If the committee favorably recommends Memphis for final consideration during the league owners meeting at Miami in January, affirmative votes from 20 of the 26 NFL owners will be required to admit the Grizzlies.

Bassett, a 36-year-old Canadian millionaire and one of the strongmen behind the defunct WFL, is spending $500,000 on his quest for an NFL franchise and has won the support of Memphis political, civic and business leaders.

He is seeking the support of the general public, with heavy television, radio and newspaper advertising, in a drive to sell 40,000 $10 season ticket pledges by Dec. 23.

As of Wednesday, 25,585 pledges had been sold. A three-hour local telethon promoting ticket pledge sales is scheduled Tuesday night from the Mid-South Coliseum.

The CBS television network has announced it will devote a segment of its Dec. 21 "NFL Today" program to an on-the-scene report of the "NFL-a-thon."

"It will be an objective piece," CBS sports vice president Robert Wussler said Tuesday, "but our attitude on this is to support Memphis as a civic endeavor."

The Price Will be High

Csonka Wants to Play

MIAMI (UPI) — Larry Csonka definitely wants to play football again next year but the team that gets him will have to pay—and that team may not be the Miami Dolphins.

Csonka, here this week to tape a television show, is under contract to play for the Memphis Southmen of the defunct World Football League. The team's owner, John Bassett, is keeping his roster intact in the hopes of being admitted into the NFL.

But if the 240-pound fullback becomes a free agent next year, the team that lands him will have to shell out big money for his services.

"Whatever I do, I'm going to play for a suitable contract," he said. "I'm not giving my services away. There are things that will have to be settled in my favor."

Joe Robbie, the managing general partner for the Dolphins, has indicated he is unwilling to pay Csonka an astronomical sum, but Csonka isn't quite sure if he wants to return to Miami.

"How do you come back once you've left," he said. "I like this town. It's natural for me to be here, but I don't want to come back and try to top myself. In that sense, it would be much easier to go someplace else, to start fresh.

"I think about the championship years, my times with Don Shula, what we had here. Those days are the kind you like to sit around a small beer joint in Ohio and talk about. But I think about Shula and I wonder what it would be like to be across the field from the best."

Even away from the team, Csonka remains a Dolphin fan.

"I'll be cheering for the team the rest of the way," he said. "I couldn't watch the game Sunday and I was killing myself trying to get it on the radio. I had to settle for the highlight film."

Csonka admits he's thought about retirement but said there is no question he wants to play somewhere next year.

"Above the money, the crowd, the glory, I love to play the game. I've thought about retirement but here I am out of football and having to try very hard to stay busy. Hell, I miss football."

Dwight White is Ailing But He Should be Ready

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Defensive end Dwight White of the Pittsburgh Steelers was sent home early Wednesday when a sinus condition flared up, but a club spokesman said he would be ready for Saturday's nationally televised game with the Cincinnati Bengals.

Another member of Pittsburgh's famed defensive unit, Joe Greene, showed no apparent effects from a recent injury in Wednesday's workout. Greene has been sidelined with a groin injury he suffered in the first meeting with the Bengals. He did not play in last Sunday's game against Cleveland.

Coach Chuck Noll is not expected to decide whether to start Greene against the Bengals until just before game time. He would be replaced by Steve Furness.

If the Steelers defeat the Bengals, it would wrap up their second consecutive Central Division title in the American Football Conference. A Cincinnati win would enable the Bengals to tie the Steelers for the lead.

Pittsburgh defeated the Bengals 30-24 in Cincinnati and the Steelers are favored to repeat Saturday.

A homework assignment for anyone taking the Utica Club Bar Exam.

As with any exam, you should be well schooled before you take ours. But we'd hate to see you do any last minute cramming.

So we suggest that you go into practice well before you take the Utica Club Bar Exam.

In the privacy of your own home, take any two beers of your choice and one of our choice, Utica Club. Pour them into mugs and mix the mugs up. Or, if you want to make it a full dress rehearsal, have someone blindfold you. Just to make sure you taste the beers, not the labels.

We think you'll choose the beer of our choice over the others.

Because when it comes to making our beer, we're from the old school. For example, we make sure that only whole grains go into a Utica Club. Anything less would make for a lesser beer.

And the water that goes into a

Utica Club is so good it could be bottled and sold by itself.

Besides, every day Utica Club makes the grade with the toughest testers we know: Us.

Which is why we think it can make the grade with you.

If it doesn't...continue practicing. If it does, you've done all the studying necessary.

Struggling Hawks Suffer One-Sided Swim Defeat

ONEONTA New Paltz State swimming coach Art Stockin said after Wednesday's defeat to Oneonta State, "I don't ever remember a score like it."

The struggling Hawks went down by an overwhelming 96-13 count and will sit on an 0-2 record now until the rest of the schedule resumes January 17 with a home meet against Stony Brook.

"Oneonta is a traditionally strong team, and right now we're having trouble being representative," Stockin said. "Our boys just lack a background in swimming. We'll be better in the second half, though, Dave Loeffler will become eligible then. He's a conference champion, and he should pick us up a little."

The Hawks couldn't pick up anything better than Scott Smith's second place in the 1000 freestyle against Oneonta. That and ten third places was the sum total of the New Paltz scoring. Oneonta swept the 11 individual first places and both relays.

The highlight of the meet was double winner Jack Walsh's 290.8 score in the optional diving. It was a new pool record.

Oneonta 96, New Paltz 13
400 medley relay—Oneonta (Fitzgerald, Roth, Mahoney, Farrell), 4:09.3.
1000 freestyle—Williams (O), Smith (NP), Lopkoff (NP), 11:56.1.

Season Opens Friday

KHS Wrestlers Look Strong

KINGSTON "I think the league is finally catching up to Arlington. Everybody will be tough. And we should do well also."

"That's the succinct prediction of Kingston High School wrestling coach Dean Short as he prepares to send his team out for its 1975-76 debut Friday night at Kate Walton Field House against non-league foe New Paltz.

The JV match begins at 6:30 p.m. with the varsity contest to follow. Admission is free.

Kingston, which finished last season with a 10-5 record and a third place effort in the Dutchess County Scholastic League tournament, lost the outstanding Rich Sippel (167) and the powerful Paul Martino (177). But a strong nucleus returns, making thoughts of a league championship within reason.

The DCSL meet, incidentally, will be hosted by Kingston on February 20 and 21.

The case of Bradley is interesting because last year he was one of Short's top wrestlers, but this year has gone up in weight class and hasn't been able to crack the starting lineup.

Question marks for Kingston are the upper weights because of the new wrestlers now performing there. KHS looks solid from 91 to 155.

Currently the Tigers are focusing their attentions on New Paltz, a team which tied for the UCA title last year and which beat Kingston 33-22 in a non-league match.

RH, NP Matmen Win Opening Matches

KINGSTON Two teams expected to make bids for the Ulster County Athletic League wrestling championship got off to impressive starts Wednesday. Red Hook High, winner of last year's UCAU tournament, posted a 62-0 shutout of Fallsburgh, and New Paltz handled Wallkill just as easily, 60-6.

The Raiders won six matches with pins, one with a superior decision and three others by decision. Peter Staats, Jim Crain, Tom Major, Chris Lanceto, Mike Friery and Bruce Rhodes all stopped their opponents within the time limit. Crain had the fastest time, a 1:23 pin of Bobby Helms in 105.

New Paltz missed a shutout by a decision and a draw. Tim North pulled off a 12-4 victory in 126 over the Hugies' Jim McVee, and Harold Isen of New Paltz battled to a 2-2 standoff in 112 with Wallkill's Barry Dominick.

The rest of the Hugenots racked up nine pins and one decision. Mike Burger, Tim Rock Russ Titsch and Bob Kopsick were all under two minutes with Burger's 59 second number on Bob Mann in 105 the quickest of the match.

SAUGERTIES The Saugerties High wrestling team got its season off to an encouraging start Wednesday with a 45-12 victory over non-league opponent Ellenville.

"We're young," said SHS coach Hank Smith. "I'm surprised we did this well."

Jeff Heath Dead at 59

Jeff Heath ('48 photo), who played most of his 13 years in the majors with the Cleveland Indians, died of a heart attack at his home Tuesday at the age of 59. He hit .319 as a member of the 1948 National League champion Boston Braves, who lost the World Series that year to his old team Cleveland. Heath however, sat out the series with a fractured ankle, suffered in a slide at home plate in the final game of the regular season. (UPI)

India Gains In Davis Cup

TOKYO (UPI) — India defeated Japan 3-2 today in the second round of the best-of-five Davis cup Eastern Zone elimination at the Denen Coliseum outdoor clay tennis courts. India will face the Philippines in the third round.

Vijay Amritraj, India's No. 1 player, won over Toshiro Sakai, 1973 Asian singles champion, 3-6, 6-0, 6-4, 6-3, in the first of the two final-day singles to give India an unbeatable 3-1 lead. It was Japan's 12th consecutive loss to India in Davis Cup elimination rounds.

Second World Cup Triumph For Lise Marie Morerod

APRICA, Italy (UPI) — Switzerland's Lise Marie Morerod flew down an Alpine slalom track almost three seconds ahead of her closest challenger Thursday to record her second victory of the new World Cup ski season.

Austria's Monika Kaserer and Hanny Wenzel of Liechtenstein failed to make the first 10 of the first heat. After two downhill and a giant slalom, the Austrians led the standings with four of the top 11 places (11 rather than 10 because of ties). Switzerland held three and West Germany and the United States two each.

Lineman of the Year

Selmon Named

NEW YORK (UPI) — Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma, a brainy and brawny tackle who was the mainstay of one of the nation's most respected defensive units, today was named Lineman of the Year by the United Press International in a balloting of sports writers and sportscasters from across the nation.

Selmon, a 6-foot-2, 256-pound senior from Eufaula, Okla., won by a narrow margin over senior defensive tackle Steve Niehaus of Notre Dame. In a poll of 100 sports writers and sportscasters, Selmon received 29 votes to edge Niehaus by just four votes.

Center Rik Bonness of Nebraska and defensive end Leroy Cook of Alabama tied for third with 11 votes apiece while linebacker Ed Simonini of Texas A&M received six votes.

Selmon, a scholar-athlete who carries a 3.36 average in special education, was credited with 132 tackles this season, 88 of them unassisted. He had 10 tackles that resulted in 48 yards in losses, recovered four fumbles and blocked a kick.

"It's easy to say he's the best we've ever had here," said Larry Lacewell, an Oklahoma assistant coach who is in charge of the defense. "I can't really believe there's been a better one anywhere."

He's the best I've ever seen in my coaching career at his position.

Italy's Claudia Giordani was third, followed by French girls Fabienne Serrat and Danielle Debernard.

Morerod won the giant slalom at Val D'Isere last week, making her a favorite for the February Innsbruck Olympics.

She said this run made her "much more nervous" and she did not want to know the other competitors' times after the first heat.

Christa Zechmeister of West Germany was eliminated when she missed the first gate. Another strong contender, Betsy Clifford of Canada, fell near the bottom of the course.

Las Vegas Trip Comes Up 'Snake Eyes'

By UPI

A trip to Las Vegas came up "snake eyes" for ninth-ranked Arizona.

Arizona, the favorite to win the Western Athletic Conference this season, lost its second game this week Wednesday night when 11th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas scored a 98-94 victory by holding the Wildcats' top scorer, Bob Elliott, to only three points.

The Rebels built an 18-8 lead in the first five minutes but Arizona drew even and both teams scored in spurts throughout the game. Las Vegas led 47-42 at the half and 94-85 with three minutes left to play.

Eddie Owens scored 25 points to spark the Rebels' victory. Len Gordy led Arizona with 22 points but Elliott, who entered the game with a 20-point average, was held scoreless from the field and managed just three free throws.

Las Vegas is now 5-0 while Arizona, which lost to 20th-ranked Kansas State Monday night, dropped to 4-2.

In other games involving the top 20 ranked teams, No. 3 Maryland routed Georgia Tech 93-65, No. 16 Kentucky beat Miami (Ohio) 91-69, No. 19 Michigan topped South Carolina 91-82 and No. 20 Kansas State whipped Northern Illinois 86-59.

Maryland, boosting its record to 5-0, got 17 points apiece from Steve Sheppard and Larry Gibson in its rout of Georgia Tech. The Terrapins led by only 17-16 after 10 minutes but built a 43-33 halftime lead then outscored Tech 14-6 at the start of the second half to break the game open. Maryland's point total was its lowest of the season.

Kentucky, which lost its first two games to Northwestern and North Carolina, finally got into the victory column by crushing Miami behind a combined 61-point effort by Jack Givens and Rick Robey. Givens scored 31 points and Robey added 30.

Rickey Green scored 11 points in the first six minutes to give Michigan an early lead and the Wolverines then held

sank a free throw with 45 seconds left to give Oral Roberts a 70-69 victory over Tulsa. Ron Davis scored 29 points to lead Washington State to an 83-68 victory over San Francisco State and Stu Jackson poured in 20 points to help Oregon down Montana State 89-62.

Circuit Court to Hear Knight's 'Traveling Suit'

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Lawrence Circuit Court Judge H. Wayne Baker will hear arguments Friday morning in the suit by Indiana basketball coach Bobby Knight against the NCAA's rule on traveling squads.

Monroe Superior Court Judge Randy Bridges, who is also president of the IU Varsity Club, granted the NCAA a change of venue on the case Wednesday afternoon, saying he wanted the two sides to agree to a move to a neighboring county.

The hearing was set late Wednesday after defense attorney Steve Goldsmith and Knight's attorney Steve Ferguson agreed to move the case to Lawrence County.

The suit, which challenges the NCAA rule limiting the size of traveling squads as being arbitrary and capricious, seeks a preliminary injunction against enforcement of the rule.

Knight said he was anxious to get a quick ruling because his team plays Kentucky at Louisville Monday night.

The suit had been transferred from state to federal court but was returned to the state system by a federal judge who said all state remedies had not been exhausted.

KINGSTON High scoring Ertha Burris, a junior, heads the list of returnees for the Kingston High School girls varsity basketball squad in the Dutchess County Scholastic League. The team opens at John Jay on Jan. 7. Other letter players returning are seniors Diana Baker, Julia Holland, Julie Jackson, Karin Krajick, Sandy Mancuso and Jill Wells. The other junior returnee is Julie Chavis. Outstanding newcomers include juniors Lori Eaton, Maida Lewis and Debbie Hopper and senior Pearl Gay and sophomore Lynette Byrd.

Teresa Thomas, Linda Van Wagner and Chanise Evans. Coach Pat Burke's varsity will play 15 games, with non-league contests scheduled against Coleman and Onteora. "We hope to make a strong run at the DCSL championship this time around," said varsity coach Pat Burke. "We have a better balanced scoring attack and seem to be much sharper on defense than last year," the Kingston coach rates Lourdes, John Jay, Roo-

Perry's Book Popular

STONE RIDGE A book on "Basketball" written by Mike Perry, the basketball coach at Ulster County Community College, has been published in Finland and Denmark and already sold over 10,000 copies.

Initially published in Sweden, the book was written by Perry while on leave from UCC to coach the Swedish National basketball team. It gives illustrated information on defensive and offensive basketball techniques and also contains details on dribbling, rebounding, shooting and explanation of the rules.

Perry has one of the highest winning records in the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA). He has twice won Coach of the Year honors in Region XV which takes in Long Island, metropolitan New York, the Hudson Valley and schools in Connecticut.

End of Line In Delmonica

NEW YORK (UPI) — Delmonica Hanover, one of the top trotters in history, was retired Wednesday.

The seven-year-old mare, who won the $200,000 Roosevelt International in 1973 and 1974 and the $230,000 Prix d'Amerique at Vincennes near Paris in 1974, goes to Hanover Shoe Farm in Hanover, Pa. to be bred to Super Bowl, whom she pushed to a stakes and world record victory in the 1972 Hambletonian.

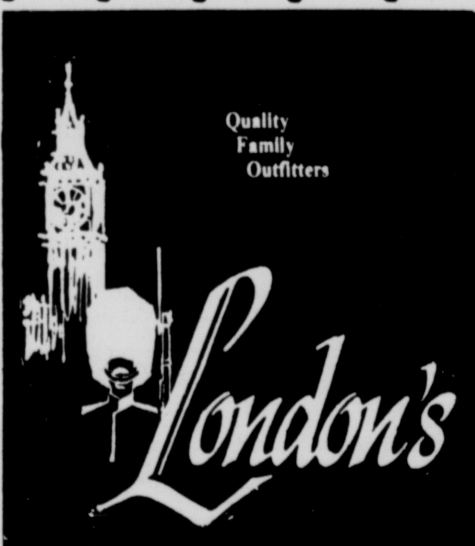

Trainer Delvin Miller announced the retirement following her career best 1:50 2-5 mile triumph last weekend in a $19,500 purse at Hollywood Park.

Delmonica Hanover retired with $843,823 in purse earnings, placing her in eighth place all-time among trotters, according to the United States Trotting Association.

The Familiar Ms. King

Billie Jean King made these strange faces after a few bad moves in her match against Virginia Wade in a Virginia Slims tournament earlier this year. The problem is, says Ms. Wade, Billie Jean's face is one of the few most fans recognize. (UPI)

Women's Tennis Needs Better Public Relations

CHICAGO (UPI) — Women's tennis needs to spread its publicity beyond the top four or five stars to improve its fan attraction, British star Virginia Wade believes.

"There should be more attention on the players who may not be in the top four or five," she said. "People get the idea that if they're not watching Billie Jean King, or Margaret Court, or Evonne Goolagong or Chris Evert that the game isn't worth watching."

"It's not the fault of anyone, really. The promoters tend to tell the public who the stars are that are going to play, and the public comes out to watch them. But there are a lot of other players who play good tennis."

Miss Wade, on tour to publicize the coming Virginia Slims series, said the Slims tournaments were "fantastic" additions to women's tennis because "there used to be sponsors who'd be there one year and gone the next. Nothing was sure."

"With these tournaments you know they're going to go on. They're consistent and give us a full winter of competition. It's incredible how much tennis you can play."

"Then, the Slims tournament has given the women recognition. Everybody knows who you are now. People stop you on the street and know you. That never happened before." She credited the Slims circuit with bringing into tennis more players who could challenge for top ratings.

"Our big struggle now is to get tennis accepted for women in Europe," she said. Outside of England and Australia, there isn't much women's tennis in the rest of the world."

Miss Wade, who finished third in earnings on the Slims tour last year with $78,063, was the only player to win consecutive championships, at Dallas and Philadelphia, and she had the longest winning streak of any player on the tour, 13 matches.

During this stretch she defeated Olga Morozova, Martina Navratilova, Evonne Goolagong, Billie Jean King and Chris Evert, all rated among the superstars of the game.

She did not credit super play for the winning streak.

"I've got a good record against the best players," she said. "I've beaten Billie Jean more than she's beaten me. I'm about equal with Evonne, and Martina, she's a hell of a player. She's ahead of me."

This year, she said, could be different. At the age of 30, "I'm fitter, and better," she said. "I could win a lot this year."

Chuck Foreman Nears 'Triple Crown'

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — No National Football Conference player has ever won the rushing, receiving and scoring titles all in one season, but Minnesota running back Chuck Foreman is likely to accomplish that triple this year.

Foreman has rushed for 961 yards on 247 carries, caught 62 passes for 600 yards and scored 18 touchdowns to top the NFC in each category.

The shifty third-year back is only 11 yards short of breaking the Vikings' single-season rushing record of 972 set by Dave Osborn in 1967 and needs only 39 yards to become Minnesota's first 1,000-yard rusher.

Foreman was injured in the third quarter of the Vikings' 24-3 victory over Green Bay Sunday and sat out the rest of the game after rushing for 64 yards and catching six Fran Tarkenton passes for 81 yards and one touchdown.

"I wish I could have gotten the 1,000 yards at home, but now I'll have to settle for that mark in Detroit next Sunday," said the 6-foot-2, 210-pound back.

"I really took a beating in the Green Bay game. I slipped and a Packer fell on my ribs. I came back in the game and the same thing happened, but the second time I got the wind knocked out of me. I wanted to go back in and could have played. I could have gotten the 1,000 yards if I had stayed in the game."

Foreman already has broken two Minnesota season records. His 18 touchdowns surpassed Bill Brown's old mark of 16 in 1964, and the 62 receptions eclipsed his own record of 53 set last year.

Tarkenton calls Foreman "the best back in all of pro football."

"You can do more with Chuck than with any other

A wide receiver his junior and senior years at Miami (Fla.) University, Foreman believes he still is improving as a runner.

"I hadn't done any running out of the backfield since my sophomore year in college when I joined the Vikings," he said, "but I feel now that I'm equal to the players who were running backs in college and are in the NFL now."

"You have to give Ed Marinaro (running back) and our line credit for a lot of my yards. They can really open up some big holes. I've scored quite a few times on a play we use a lot—just hurdle over the line and follow Marinaro and tackle Chuck Goodrum."

Minnesota Coach Bud Grant said, "Chuck isn't the fastest back in the league, but nobody has more moves than he does. His versatility gives us plenty of offensive weapons."

Early returns in the State University New York Athletic Conference (SUNYAC) indicate that the battle for the championship will be fought between Oneonta and Albany State. The teams are scheduled to meet here Jan. 24.

Oneonta State served notice in the first week of the season that it is the team to beat. Coach Don Flewelling's Red Dragons began with an expected win over Cortland, then destroyed defending champion Brockport, 94-53, in what was expected to be an early-season showdown.

Both games were played at Oneonta, where the Dragons crushed New Paltz State Tuesday.

Albany, rated a pre-season contender along with Oneonta and Brockport, also got off well, crushing Cortland on the road, 75-45, and then downed Binghamton 81-71. Geneseo beat visiting Oswego, 74-62.

Moving toward their Jan. 24 showdown, Albany faces games at Geneseo and Potsdam. Oneonta travels to Oswego Friday in its only SUNY game before the big one.

The remainder of the December and January schedule in the SUNY:

The MH-Conference: Ulster and Westchester

MIDDLETOWN Two weeks into the Mid-Hudson Conference Basketball League schedule and one thing becomes painfully obvious. Ulster and Westchester, the only unbeaten teams left, will probably lose only to each other in the conference race.

Ulster has racked up three impressive victories, but must rally from an 8-point deficit with 13:43 left to play in that "short-circuited" game with Westchester.

Ulster figures to romp against winless Orange Friday night. Dutchess and Rockland were scheduled to meet to-night (Thursday).

Early statistical leaders are

Tony Michella of Rockland in scoring with a 28.5 average and Bob McLairn of Dutchess with 26.5 average. Larry Roodes of Westchester, has a perfect 1,000 average from the free throw line. Rhodes is also the top rebounder with a 17.0 average per game.

Top assist man in the league is Ulster's Rachid Walker with a 9.5 game average. Walker also fifth in scoring with 18.0 Ray Younger is fourth in free throws (.833) and Ray Younger fourth with .833.

INDIVIDUAL LEADERS
(Scoring Average)

KINGSTON Steve Peruso (34) and Ted Wood (27) combined for 61 points to pace Edgar's to a 84-80 edge over Al's Deli in the A Division of the YMCA Basketball League. Wood also hauled in 16 rebounds.

Glenn Elliot turned in another strong performance for Al's with 32 points and 17 rebounds. Rick Peruso added 15 points.

In an inter-division contest, Joyous Lake of the A Division trounced Giustino's Market of the B Division, 88-67 on the strength of a 50-32 second half advantage.

LPGA Set

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Nine of the LPGA's best, headed by little Sandra Palmer, will compete Saturday and Sunday in the $50,000 Colgate Triple Crown invitational at the Mission Hills Country Club.

The nine women pro golfers were the top point winners in three Colgate-sponsored tournaments in the United States, Europe and Australia this year.

In addition to Miss Palmer, who won the Dinah Shore tournament here last April, the field will be made up of Pat Bradley, Chako Higuchi, Carol Mann, Joyce Kasmierski, Jane Bialock, JoAnn Washam, Judy Rankin and JoAnne Carner.

Foreman Believes Bicentennial Will be His Year

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — George Foreman hasn't fought a major bout since he lost the heavyweight championship to Muhammad Ali in Zaire, Africa, in October, 1974. Since then he has weathered a state of near depression, fought some exhibition fights that have been roundly criticized and put together a new "fighting family."

What Foreman is trying to say is that he's back in town, wants another shot at Ali and wants to do it in America's Bicentennial year.

"I think that 1976 is going to be the year of George Foreman," the 27-year-old baby-faced former champion said Wednesday. "I think with the Bicentennial coming up, it's going to mean a lot to me. I feel I have a lot to do with the image of the United States and the image of young people, and if I can lose the title one year and win in back in 1976—it will inspire George Foreman to a lot of other things."

Foreman's confident pitch sounds almost like a direct reference to his days as an amateur boxer on the U.S. Olympic team at the 1968 Games at Mexico City. During those turbulent days of racial strife in America, a couple of black track athletes refused to honor the American flag when they were awarded medals at the Games, and instead hoisted black power salutes.

Foreman reacted bitterly and when his turn came to win the gold medal for boxing, he raised a small American flag in a personal show of patriotism.

Foreman's attempted comeback as a pro comes Jan. 24 at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev., when he will meet No. 5 ranked heavyweight Ron Lyle in a 12-round bout on national television.

Both fighters have been victims of Ali and both regard victory as a must in their hopes for a rematch.

Foreman's new boxing family includes former pro football star and actor Jim Brown as his advisor. Brown said he witnessed Foreman's eighth-round knockout at the hands of Ali in person.

"I offered him a few suggestions," said Brown. "I told him later on I would work with him and put a program together that would help him win the heavyweight championship back."

Others in Foreman's new camp include manager Gil Clancy and trainer Kid Rapidez, who also trains welterweight Jose Napoles.

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for my new team," said Foreman. "I think Kid Rapidez and Gil Clancy are the most important ingredients in the picture."

Foreman, boasting a record of 40 wins with 37 KOs and one loss, reigned as world champion for nearly two years before his loss to Ali.

"I went through a little state of almost being depressed," Foreman said. "But then I did something that I had never done before in the profession—I lost a fight. The world loves a winner and I expect to get a lot of kisses, too."

"Africa is in the past. I was champion before. I believe I can become champion again. Ali is a tremendous athlete and a tremendous fighter."

"I feel I lost the fight and the only way I'll become champion again is by getting into the ring and beating the world champion at the time. History will look at my loss (Zaire fight) as a whole and look at it fair and square. So why should I be different than history?"

Lyle, 34, of Denver, was defeated by Ali last May 16 in an 11th round TKO in Las Vegas. Lyle indicated this would be the biggest fight of his career.

"I consider myself as the best contender in the top 10 because I've fought some good fighters and stood up against some good fighters," he said.

"I don't see George Foreman as being indestructible or invincible. He's human. He knows what it's like to be a victim of a knockout."

Lyle, who has a record of 32 wins with 22 knockouts and two losses, to Ali and Jerry Quarry, said his plan against Foreman would be "to win. I don't think there's any such thing as a game plan in boxing. When you get right down to the nitty-gritty, it is an act of survival."

"When the curtain falls, everyone knows their parts and lines and knows how to adjust. George has to worry about me—I don't have to worry about him."

49er's Trainer All Wrapped Up in His Work

By Murray Olderman

REDWOOD CITY, CALIF. — (NEA) — When Chuck Krpata finishes wrapping and taping the brawny bodies of the San Francisco 49ers, the amount of elastic and adhesive used would stretch all the way from their home city to rugged Big Sur on the California coast — a distance of 125 miles.

Just for one game, Chuck will use a full mile of 1.5-inch tape — 5,280 feet, 1,760 yards. But that's only a small part of what it takes to minister to half a hundred athletes in the flower of their youth and strength.

The training room of a football team is a mechanical maze marked off by endless spools of tape.

Chuck, like every other trainer in major league football, baseball and basketball, is more than just an applicator of bandages. "We have a closer, more meaningful relationship with the players," he maintains, "than even the coaches."

That's because sometimes he sees them even more. But that relationship, thanks to modern technology, isn't just a soothing squeeze of the muscles, a friendly swat on the butt and a word of encouragement. Chuck can push buttons to reach deep aches and measure muscular responses. And he can embellish his personal psychology with the knowledge gained from intense schooling which included a masters degree in physical therapy (the University of Southern California).

None of it (including the shoeing) comes cheap. In one training room, the 49ers have rigged up a couple of chairlike contraptions wired to machines. They were not transposed from Sing Sing. They are a cybex (Price tag: $6,500) and two orthitrons ($1,200) each, and their function is to measure by electronic printouts on the cybex which resemble an EKG, muscular strengths and defects revealed by isokinetic exercises with the orthitrons.

"How far along is he?" Coach Dick Nolan will ask Krpata (his name sounds like one of his machines). And Chuck will tell him the defensive back with the hamstring pull is 80 per cent back to normal.

"The cybex has taken the guesswork out of it," says Chuck.

Tests revealed that Norm Snead, the veteran quarterback who came to the club last year, had a strength deficit in his right knee. They gave him an orthitron to take home for the winter for exercises, and now Snead says his hinge has never been stronger. So does the cybex.

Also among Chuck's paraphernalia are a combination ultra sound and electric stimulation machine ($759) to apply deep heat to contusions, sprains and strains; a hydrocollator tank for hot towels; three whirlpool baths for strategic immersion; an iontophoresis machine which induces medication through the skin instead of having to inject the patient—trainers are not allowed to inject, and docots aren't always around; and an ice machine—"one of the most valuable of all," notes Chuck, since it produces 600 pounds of ice every 24 hours, and the 49ers use it all, plus 200 pounds daily which they buy in town.

In one corner stands a mysterious looking, aluminum-plated chest. It is Chuck's specially designed travel kit to take with him to all games, a virtual mobile infirmary. In it are such diverse items as telfa pads, prewrap gauze, adhesive tape (half-inch, 1-inch, 1.5-inch), elastic tape (1.2-3-inch), tape cutters, tape adherent, plastic bags, tape remover, plastic casting material, three different sizes of Band Aids, elastic expandable Band Aids, vaseline, foot powders, elastic bandages for wrapping injuries, cast cutters and hypo allergenic tape.

An auxiliary trunk also contains knee braces, cervical collars, wrist splints, shoulder immobilizers, arm slings, two pairs of crutches, metal cutters (for face masks) and an emergency stretcher.

Chuck doesn't want to be caught short in any emergency. But all the devices and all the gadgetry bow inevitably to the human factor in a crisis. A few weeks ago a rookie full-back, Wayne Bullock of Notre Dame, crumpled in a scrimmage on a nearby practice field.

Chuck, thirtyish and fit enough to be a player himself, rushed out and immediately determined the player had fractured the tibia of his right leg. He cut off the shoe and sock and, by examination and palpitations, figured out the fibia was also fractured. In one minute, he had an air splint on the limb. In four minutes, a rescue crew from a nearby hospital had arrived. In 20 minutes, Bullock was in the operation room.

There's hope he'll come back to play next season. By which time, Chuck will have paid the tape bill for this season. It comes to $12,000.

Double up, America.

Two can ride cheaper than one.

New USGA Program

FAR HILLS, N.J. — Individual golfers would have closer ties with the national ruling body of the game — the United States Golf Association — under a new concept in affiliation which the USGA will introduce next week.

The program, to be known as the USGA Associates Program, will be inaugurated at a luncheon at the Hotel Washington, Washington, D. C. on Thursday, Dec. 18. It will be introduced by the Executive Committee of the USGA and Arnold Palmer, National Chairman of the Associates Program.

Palmer will designate President Gerald R. Ford the first USGA Associate.

Under the Associates Program an individual may help support the work of the USGA. Previously, only clubs provided financial support through payment of membership dues. Other USGA income has come primarily from championships.

Clubs will continue to comprise the USGA's membership, but the Associates Program will provide an individual with the opportunity to have a direct affiliation with the USGA. It gives the association a broader contact with individual golfers and provides better communication between the USGA and all golfers.

The Associates Program is the result of a study lasting more than a year. For some time, the USGA has been searching for a method of reaching millions of golfers on an individual basis so that they could become more closely identified with the organization. After extensive research, the Executive Committee, under the leadership of Harton S. Semple of Sewickley, Pa., the USGA president, developed this concept.

The Association also considers it essential to broaden its sources of revenue. Currently, much of its income is generated by the U.S. Open Championship.

USGA Associate status is available in three categories: single, $12 annual fee; husband and wife, $16; Junior, $8.

As an expression of appreciation for his support each USGA Associate will receive from the USGA:

A copy of the Rules of Golf Booklet.

A golf bag tag bearing the USGA seal, the Associate's name, and the year.

SUBJECT: Sunday Opening

TO: Our Customers

FROM: Yallum's

Quite frankly, our phone has been ringing an inordinate amount of times questioning whether we will be opening on Sunday. It has not been an easy question to put to rest — obviously we realize that by not opening we may be put in a competitively disadvantaged position. Yet, we feel that there are too many reasons for not opening. Here they are:

1. It is illegal: despite the fact that the District Attorney chooses not to enforce the law (for sensible reasons) the law still exists. It seems to us that if we are to make sense to our children (and ourselves) about obeying the law, even when we don't happen to agree, there needs to be some consistency in what we preach.

2. This seemingly endless proliferation in store hours seeks to find advantage by increasing hours over those who don't. If carried to extreme stores could be open 168 hours a week. We don't think any more money is spent in total, but obviously the store that stays open more hours is aiming for a bigger portion of the pie.

3. We've said it many times before — we believe in a staff of first class people. We cannot expand our hours and expect to continue to attract that caliber of individual. We cannot work in shifts because the quality help we hope we have requires compensation at a high level.

4. Finally, this Sunday (and every Sunday) we want to rest, to play, to read, to watch football, to walk, to be with our families. We look forward to it all week — it's why we work the other six days.

UCCC Adult Survey

STONE RIDGE
Beginning this week about 70 Ulster County adults are now pounding the pavement and knocking on their neighbor's doors as part of a statewide survey to assess the educational needs and desires of area adults.

The survey, which will end Jan. 5, is the product of a joint effort of the State Educational Department and Cornell University. It is being coordinated on the local level by the Office for Continuing Education at Ulster County Community College (UCCC) in Stone Ridge.

According to Ronald A. Koster, associate dean for continuing education at UCCC, the project, once completed, will enable both state and local educational institutions to provide a wider range of responsive educational programs, based on the needs and wants of area residents, as expressed in the survey.

During the past five years while enrollments in four-year institutions has been on the decline, continuing education programs administered through local school districts, two- and four-year colleges, as well as BOCES programs have enjoyed unprecedented growth. Based on statistics computed by the State Educational Department in Albany, an ever-increasing number of adults are once more "hitting the books" in continuing education programs as a means of either improving job-related skills, or just as a recreational vehicle.

The survey is being conducted by randomly selecting individuals in local school districts and administering a 25- to 30-minute interview. Upon completion of the survey, it is estimated that nearly 35,000 New Yorkers will have been interviewed, about 700 of them in Ulster County.

The results from the survey are expected to be released sometime next spring, and it is hoped that local continuing education programs will be able to implement some of the short range recommendations by the following fall.

NW Nuclear Plants Of Major Concern

RICHLAND, Wash. (UPI) — Major concerns are surfacing in the Northwest over the rapid construction of a trio of large nuclear power plants on the once super-secret Hanford Atomic Reservation.

The Washington Public Power Supply System is building the plants to an ultimate generating capacity of 3.5 million kilowatts of electricity.

The benefits are obvious: thousands of additional jobs for Richland and its sister cities of Kennewick and Pasco, and a large quantity of power to help offset shortages expected in the Northwest in the coming years.

But there are serious questions regarding all aspects of nuclear energy, particularly the million-plus kilowatt reactors taking shape at Hanford and elsewhere in the country.

"My feeling is that it's a system out of control," said Dr. John Sheppard, a Hanford scientist for nine years and now head of Washington State University's Radiation Isotope Lab.

"I'm not necessarily one to say stop, but there are still serious problems that have to do with whether there is enough uranium to keep them (reactors) going, and then the longer-term problems of radioactive waste, which are not settled by any means."

Sheppard said the industry should be moving slowly in development of large nuclear plants until such questions are answered.

Echoing Sheppard's concern is Dr. Eric Cheney, a geological sciences professor at the University of Washington.

"Even if nuclear reactors were absolutely failsafe there are still the insurmountable problems of uranium reserves and waste storage," Cheney said.

He said world uranium supplies will last 90 to 100 years, yet nuclear reactors are generating waste problems that will last 700 to 500,000 years.

"How could the government guarantee storage that long? That sounds like they are talking about a nuclear priesthood that would make the CIA look like a bunch of school kids."

The concerns of experts like Sheppard and Cheney are not new. They go back more than 30 years when the federal government carved Hanford out of 570 square miles of sagebrush-covered desert along the Columbia River.

It was all part of the World War II Manhattan Project to produce nuclear weapons. Plutonium created in Hanford reactors fueled the first atomic bomb.

Only one of the nine plutonium-production reactors built during and after the war remains in operation today. The others were phased out in the late 1960s.

In their place are a host of nuclear-related projects, including a $622 million research breeder reactor being built for the government by Westinghouse Hanford Co., and the three WPPSS projects.

One of them is scheduled to begin generating 1,100 megawatts of power in 1978 or 1979, and the other two, both rated at 1,250 megawatts, should be ready in the early 1980s.

Those in the industry say there is no way this type of reactor can blow up, and if the fuel core should overheat and melt — the worst thing they say could happen — a variety of safety systems would prevent any accidental release of dangerous radioactive fission products.

Scientists also say that a number of optional processes and techniques are available for safe treatment, transport and storage of nuclear waste.

Because of the leakage of nearly 463,000 gallons of high-level radioactive waste from underground storage tanks at Hanford over a 17-year period, the government is well on the way to solidifying waste, but the containment program is only a short-term measure.

Sheppard said the entire waste storage problem is an "albatross around the government's neck" because, historically, most federal funds have gone into reactor development and not waste management.

Critics also point to government studies that report a major nuclear reactor accident could result in thousands of deaths and billions of dollars in property damage.

When the first WPPSS plant goes on the line near the end of this decade, it will produce about 20 tons of nuclear waste per year, according to Cheney.

Government officials say the spent fuel from the plant, like others, will likely be sent back East for reprocessing as soon as commercial facilities to handle that chore are completed.

Safely transporting radioactive waste from coast to coast becomes another challenge that those in the industry must deal with.

'Princess Alice' Still Holds Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alice Roosevelt Longworth at 91 is still holding court at late afternoon tea parties in her Massachusetts Avenue home, but she says she will now discuss only "happy things."

The daughter of Teddy Roosevelt and widow of Speaker Nicholas Longworth, "Princess Alice" lives alone in a dark mansion cluttered with mementos and memories of 85 years in the capital.

Among her aging possessions are her father's big game animal pelts, signed photographs of people straight from history books, and the widely quoted needlepoint pillow which says, "If you haven't got anything good to say about anyone, come sit by me."

Once the reigning "grande dame" of Washington, she has met every President from Benjamin Harrison to Richard Nixon, and her sharp, irreverent tongue has spared no one.

To her, Warren G. Harding was a "slob," Calvin Coolidge "looked as if he had been weaned on a pickle" and Thomas E. Dewey reminded her of "the little man on the wedding cake." She once referred to the present occupant of the White House as "poor, dull Ford."

Born on Long Island Feb. 12, 1884, Mrs. Longworth came to Washington when she was 6, and recalls that "no young person could have been more frivolous than I was."

As a young girl, when forbidden to smoke in the White House or anywhere else because it was unladylike, she would climb to the roof of the executive mansion to sit and smoke for hours.

"I can govern the country or govern Alice, but I can't govern both," her father said.

With the news of President McKinley's assassination and her father's succession to the presidency, Mrs. Longworth recalls she was overjoyed.

"I danced a little dance of happiness. I was never so pleased about anything. I didn't give a damn. Father wanted the White House. Father must have the White House."

When she was married in 1906 to Longworth, then a congressman from Ohio, it was considered the Washington social event of the century, despite the omission of bridesmaids and the use of a sword to cut the wedding cake.

She spent a lifetime surrounded by politics but never taking an active part. "I didn't want politics. I love it around me, but had no temptation to run for office. I was too shy," she said.

In the twilight of her years, Mrs. Longworth, thin, angular and energetic, still enjoys going to dinner parties or reading until 3 or 4 in the morning. She sleeps until noon and has company for tea every day at 5 o'clock.

But lately she refuses to discuss politics or current events. When asked in a recent conversation for her opinion of President Ford, his outspoken wife or New York City's financial difficulties, her reply was the same: "I don't know because I don't think about things like that anymore."

Postcard Boom Next Christmas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the price of a first class stamp about to jump to 13 cents after the holidays, the greeting card industry believes there could be a boom next year in postcard greetings.

The reason is obvious. A Christmas postcard next year could go for 10 cents, three cents less than the traditional card-and-envelope.

Only a few postcards are on the market so far from two big manufacturers and UNICEF, the United Nations organization that traditionally sells Christmas cards, says Harry Cooper of the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers. Cooper thinks greeting cards are a matter of tradition, based on the idea of confidentiality with a sealed envelope, especially when senders write messages on cards.

He said the first Christmas cards 90 years ago were postcards.

Meanwhile, the publishers' trade group favors legislation pending in Congress to freeze the first class rate at 10 cents for individual users.

Cooper said this could be accomplished by using a special stamp for personal mail. A severe penalty could be levied to discourage use of the 10-cent rate for other than personal purposes.

Otherwise, Cooper said, business in the greeting card industry appears to be good this year, recession or no.

A recent inquiry from a Floridian trying to keep snakes from her back yard prompted this from a reader in San Jose, Calif.:

"While working at IBM . . . in Los Gatos, Calif., I noted a fence around the building and grounds. Since it was only one foot high I asked what it was for. They told me they had built the building on a snake run, where rattlesnakes migrate each year.

"They were finding them inside the buildings . . ."

"The solution . . . was a foot-high electrical fence . . . set to shock the snakes, but not kill them. Needless to say, they did not enter the area any more . . ."

Thanks for the information. We don't know if a fence would be worth the investment for the average householder, but it might be worthwhile for anyone with a severe snake problem.

On the home canning front:

The Agriculture Department, noting that three million Americans tried home canning for the first time this fall, says now is the time to examine each jar closely.

"A bulge or leak means that the seal is broken, and the food has spoiled," the USDA said. Spoilage also is indicated by spurting liquid, off odor or mold when a jar is opened.

"Food that appears too soft or mushy may be spoiled. Even if all looks well . . . never taste home-canned foods right out of the jar. Bring vegetables to a rolling boil, then cover and boil for at least 10 minutes. Boil meats and poultry, covered, for 20 minutes. Heating usually makes any odor of spoilage more evident."

For the woman who's at the heart of her family's finances.

You can't afford to be wrong. Because if you're in charge of the family budget, you're making decisions about the future, too.

And that's where U.S. Savings Bonds come in. Buy them through your bank. Or encourage your husband to sign up for the Payroll Savings Plan where he works.

That way, while you're meeting the day-to-day expenses, you'll still be building a more secure future for your family.

U.S. Savings Bonds. For the woman who really knows a good bargain.

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4% the first year). Bonds are replaced if lost, stolen or destroyed. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Wants New Units

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commission on Civil Rights said today women and minorities still face discrimination in the housing market and called on Congress to authorize 600,000 new units of low and moderate-income housing annually until 1978.

"The effect of discrimination in housing has caused untold suffering for minorities and women, especially those at the lower end of the economic scale," the commission said in a 188-page report, "Twenty Years After Brown: Equal Opportunity in Housing."

Discrimination "has kept a much larger proportion of minorities and women from acquiring any but the worst housing available," the commission added.

It criticized both the president and Congress for abandoning the goals of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, which called for the production or rehabilitation of 6 million units of federally-subsidized by 1978.

In addition, it said the federal government had been "timid in its approach" to production of low cost housing and that federal agencies had failed to strongly enforce laws against housing discrimination.

Federal policy, the commission said, "has been a major factor in creating segregated neighborhoods."

The commission singled out the Justice Department in particular for failing to support "a metropolitan remedy" for segregation in central-city public housing.

"The position taken by the solicitor general indicates that the federal government is still unwilling to take effective action to promote residential desegregation," the report said.

The report on housing is the last in the commission's series reviewing the status of women and minorities 20 years after the landmark Supreme Court decision outlawing school desegregation, "Brown v. Board of Education." Other reports in the series covered economics, education and the historical background of the decision.

More dependable than a man.

Someday a handsome prince will ride up and carry you away.

Or maybe you don't see it that way.

Not that you've got anything against handsome princes. It's just that they're not very reliable.

That's why it's nice to know you've got some control over your future. Like being financially prepared for whatever lies ahead.

And one of the easiest ways to build future funds is with U.S. Savings Bonds. Buy them through your bank. Or join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

Bonds are steady, solid, dependable. Just the kind of security a girl needs.

Then if your handsome prince does come along, so much the better.

You can always buy him a castle.

Now U.S. Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years. 4 1/2% the first year. Bonds are repaid if lost, stolen or destroyed. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

A faithful performance bond in the sum of one hundred per cent (100%) of the contract price will be required.

The County Legislature of Ulster County, New York reserves the right to reject any or all bids as it may deem to be in the best interest of the County of Ulster, New York. Compliance with Section 103a and 103d, with amendments, of the General Municipal Law is required.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let associates do your thinking for you today. If you have an idea how something should be done, pursue it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Let your better self rule your decisions today. Be helpful even toward those who have been unappreciative in the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A positive, outgoing attitude will serve you well to bring friends out of their doldrums today. Uplift them. Don't sink to their

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your luck will carry you only so far today. Being considerate will earn gratitude for you and help out where Dame Fortune fails.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Opportunity is all around you today, although your attitude may be unduly pessimistic. Brighten up. Expect good things.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Look beyond your nose today. Your outlook is too restricted. What looks good now may prove costly in the long run.

Yesterday's article discussed the Herbert convention in which the next ranking suit is used as the negative response to a strong two bid. The convention is interesting, but it has the serious weakness that it gets you into lots of trouble when you want to make a positive response in the next ranking suit. We feel that this disadvantage overbalances its advantages.

Today's hand shows an example of a modification first suggested by Theodore Lightner in 1933 or '34. The Lightner variation provides that when you open with two; your partner makes a negative response, and you simply rebid to three of your own suit, partner may pass with a real blank.

We recommend the Lightner variation strongly provided that you understand it only applies when there is a negative response followed by a simple rebid of the first suit on a really hopeless hand.

Today's North hand is a good example. It really can't produce a part of a trick. He passes and South makes three spades.

Back to the Money Tree

KINGSTON
It's back to the money tree for city officials who had hoped the federal government would be willing to foot the bill for some $2.5 million worth of municipal construction projects last October.

The city's application for funding under Title-10 of the 1965 Economic Development Act (EDA) has been rejected by federal officials.

The city had asked for a million dollars for the restoration and rehabilitation of the old city hall, $750,000 for a new public works garage, $500,000 for a new fire station and $300,000 for a beautification program.

Kingston officials weren't all that optimistic about getting the money, considering Kingston's per capita share of the $375 million is emergency funds would have been about

The Department of Commerce reported that there were nearly 10,000 eligible proposals totaling $3.5 billion but that only about 10 per cent were ultimately approved.

"We weren't really surprised," said City Planner Robert Pritchard who was given the bad but not unexpected news by Congressman Hamilton Fish's office on Monday.

Mayor Francis R. Koenig was also philosophical about it, sending Pritchard back to the drawing board in search for more federal or state funding for those projects.

Victory Upheld

KINGSTON
Supreme Court Justice Robert Williams has upheld Robert Mitchell's narrow victory over Ralph Hayner in the race for highway superintendent in the town of Ulster.

Williams, acting on a complaint brought by Republican Hayner reduced Democrat Mitchell's 10-vote margin to two votes. The case was heard last Friday and a decision rendered on Monday.

Hayner has not yet made a decision on whether to appeal Williams' ruling.

Glazer Unhappy With Contract

By Carl Graham
ROSENDALE

Central Hudson wants a new street lighting contract with the Town of Rosendale—one that will include a fuel cost adjustment clause. Supervisor Richard Glazer is unhappy with the contract.

Glazer said at Wednesday night's town board meeting that the contract as it is written would be binding on the present town board and "its heirs and assigns," a legal phrase he says would bind all succeeding town boards.

Noting that the contract made no provision for termination by the town, although the utility has such a right, Glazer said: "I don't think the Public Service Commission has given Central Hudson the right to blackmail the town. I suggest we meet with them and negotiate this."

He said that the utility had notified the town that streetlights will be turned off if a new contract is not signed before March 1 to replace the January, 1971 pact now in force.

The board voted to set up a negotiation session with Central Hudson and to notify the town's three county legislators and the Public Service Commission of their action.

The board voted to create a seven-member town recreation commission, with Recreation Director Robert Strini as one of the members and chairman of the new group. No one was named to the new commission which will eventually have members serving seven year terms with one expiring each year.

The commission is charged with setting policies, "establishing and maintaining" parks, playgrounds and recreation areas, and spending funds budgeted for recreation by the town board.

Glazer said the move would enable the town to do year-round planning for recreation and to utilize to the fullest extent the town's recreation center at the former LaBonne Table site.

Responding to a letter from Stanley Nichols of Bloomington, the board noted that no action had been taken to grade the property on the east side of Route 32 in Bloomington on which Kingston contractor John Shults began work on a teaching center for Ulster County BOCES.

The board voted to meet with the town planning board for a study of possible new landfill sites. Councilman William Ritter said the present site would be filled in 5-10 years. Glazer, noting that a joint study commission for six towns and the City of Kingston had fallen through, said he thought the county should investigate a common landfill operation for the various towns.

In other action, the board: • Set a public hearing for the proposed town fire code for the town hall at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 17.

• Voted $50 to the Children's Christmas party put on by Rosendale firemen.

• Set its annual audit meeting for 7 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 29.

• Set its reorganizational meeting for 7:30 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 5

• Praised retiring Councilman Karl Strobel for his 10 years of service with the town board.

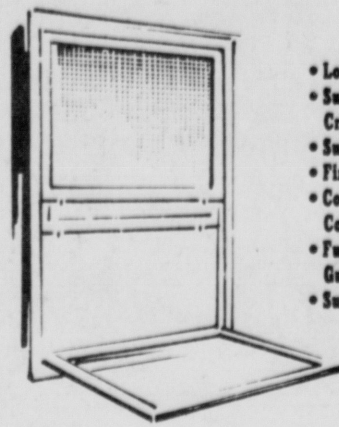

• Directed Building Inspector Otto Person to inspect all junkyards in the town.

Junkyard licenses come up for renewal Jan. 1.

IBM Slates Transfer of 500

YORKTOWN HEIGHTS
More than 500 employees of International Business Machines Corporation will be transferred from that company's System Communications Division facility in Westchester County to other Hudson Valley IBM plants.

Frank T. Carnella, director of IBM's Mohansic laboratory, announced that the move next year will mean employees will be sent with their respective projects to IBM locations in Kingston, Poughkeepsie, and White Plains.

The reason: "The transfer of laboratory programs and the closing of the Mohansic facility will improve operating efficiencies through consolidation of development activities," according to Carnella.

Stephen Huben of IBM headquarters in White Plains told the Freeman that a breakdown of how many employees would join the Kingston facility has not yet been determined. Employees will either join where development programs are being transferred or assigned to other IBM locations where their skills are in demand.

The movement of programs and personnel will begin in January and is scheduled to be completed by "the third quarter of 1976," said a news release. At that time, IBM's Real Estate and Construction Division will manage the Westchester Facility until it is either sold or another use is found.

In making the announcement, Carnella said, "Over the past 17 years IBM and its Mohansic employees have enjoyed a close association with the Town of Yorktown and its people." He emphasized that IBM's Thomas J. Watson Research Center, also in Yorktown, is unaffected by the announcement.

Successful 'Maiden Voyage' For Blood Bank Bloodmobile

KINGSTON

The Ulster County Blood Bank's new bloodmobile recently made its historic first trip a successful one, according to Arthur C. Chipp, president.

For its "maiden voyage" the bloodmobile visited the uptown banking community.

The first stop was the Rondout National Bank, where Albert Teetsel, assistant cashier and main office manager, became the first official donor in the bloodmobile.

Others followed in quick succession, and the quota was reached easily, according to Chipp.

With a turn of the switch and a short drive, the bloodmobile moved on to the parking area of the Heritage Savings Bank, where it remained for three hours, with blood bank donor members coming from four other banks to complete the day's quota.

"Without the bloodmobile's on-site location, this would not have been possible, for to release that many workers from various banks would disrupt their internal operations to a point where it could not just be done," Chipp commented, adding that it took about one-third the usual time off for workers to complete their donations.

According to Chipp, the successful first run of the bloodmobile could not have been completed without the cooperation of the management of the various banks. He also gave special thanks to the following coordinators: Teetsel of the Rondout National Bank; Francis Kugelman Jr. of the Heritage Savings Bank; John Adams and Peter Kowalenko of Ulster Savings Bank; Mrs. Edith Phillips of The Bank; Tom Becker of Statewide Savings and Loan; and Carmen Castiglione of Hudson Valley Federal Savings. Bankers Trust was held in reserve, Chipp noted.

"With the advent of the Ulster County Blood Bank's bloodmobile, a whole different and efficient service era was put in motion—the benefits will be far-reaching and important to all, the City of Kingston Laboratory, the Benedictine, Kingston and Ellenville Community hospitals, and most importantly, to those who ultimately need this life sustaining service," Chipp concluded.

Mixed Reaction On Pot Plans

By Matt Spireng

KINGSTON Gov. Hugh L. Carey's somewhat vague proposal to "decriminalize the possession of small amounts of marijuana" has been met with mixed reaction by area law enforcement officials.

While none of those surveyed by the Freeman are in favor of making it legal for individuals to possess small amounts of "pot," most would not object to treating such possession as a violation under the law, rather than a misdemeanor as at present.

A "violation" is not a crime in New York State, it has not yet been made totally clear whether the governor's proposal is to make possession of small amounts of marijuana a violation or totally legal.

The governor has been quoted as saying, "We're not legalizing marijuana"—an implication that he is proposing that possession of small amounts be made a violation. However, the main reason the governor cited for changing the law—"to free prosecutorial and judicial resources to concentrate on crime more harmful to society"—would not be achieved unless possession of small amounts of marijuana were totally legalized, according to area officials.

"Actually, marijuana cases are not what's clogging up the courts," said District Attorney Francis J. Vogt. "We handle them very quickly, usually on a fine basis at present."

Vogt noted that marijuana cases are, in effect, being treated like violations at present, except that those who are convicted wind up with criminal records.

"If we were to arrest every youngster in Ulster County using marijuana now, which is an impossibility, we would probably give 75 per cent of them criminal records," the D.A. said, explaining that while he is opposed to the legalization of marijuana, he is in favor of making possession for individual use a violation.

"A young person should not be penalized with a criminal record for the rest of his life for possession of a very minor amount of pot. But to take it completely off the books—no," commented Senior BCI Investigator Michael Lisman.

However, Lisman cautioned, "No matter how you cut the mustard, the use of marijuana is still the introduction to the narcotic field."

Sheriff Thomas F. Mayone, who is also opposed to total legalization of possession of small amounts of marijuana, suggested that while he would not be opposed to treating first offenses as violations, the second offense should be treated as a misdemeanor.

"But I can see a trend starting to lead to legalization, which I'm against," he said. Lt. Stanley Kowalik, state police zone supervisor, indicated that treating possession of small amounts of marijuana as a violation rather than as a misdemeanor would not make much difference either in treatment of the cases in court or in unclogging the courts. He is opposed to legalization, however.

Robbing Peter to Pay Paul

FISHKILL, N.Y. (UPI) — Police say it must have been a case of robbing Peter to pay Paul that led a Poughkeepsie woman to the alleged knifepoint robbery of a bank here Wednesday.

Joann Burns, 20, held up one bank for $6,083 and then drove to a bank in nearby Poughkeepsie that was threatening to repossess her green Porsche, police said.

They said it was her car, noticed by a civilian near the robbery scene and then spotted outside the second bank, that led to her arrest on a robbery charge.

Police arrested her inside the bank and she surrendered without struggle, they said.

And Baby Makes Five... Generations

Baby Lawrence Donald Lohman appears to be a bit camera-shy as he lies in the arms of his great, great grandfather, William Hornbeck, 89, a former diesel engineer for 52 years with Cornell Steam Boat Company. Although Lawrence doesn't know it, his birth on Nov. 15 marked the family's fifth generation. Other family members are the baby's grandmother, Janet Fay Short (L), wife of Donald Short, a Kingston area

Deputy Named in Grand Jury Report

KINGSTON

Ulster County Sheriff's Deputy David B. Kaplan was named in a report handed up Wednesday by the October term grand jury, which recommended that harassment charges be filed against the deputy in a lower court.

The charges stem from an October 24 incident in which it has been alleged that Kaplan, who was off-duty, and an acquaintance, both of whom were riding motorcycles, chased a car driven by William C. Walker, 20, of Palenville. When Walker saw the motorcycles behind him, he reportedly attempted to get them to move back by applying his brakes, and when they did not, he sped off at speeds reaching 100 miles an hour. Walker eventually slowed down, according to reports, and when he went to make a left turn he was involved in a collision with the motorcycle operated by the deputy's acquaintance. Following the crash, Kaplan allegedly demanded to see Walker's license. When Walker reached to get it out of his glove compartment, Kaplan allegedly pulled a gun and made Walker and his wife, who was in the car, get out of the vehicle and either sit or lie down on the pavement.

Kaplan was initially charged with misdemeanor reckless endangerment following the incident on the complaint of Walker.

The grand jury, which heard testimony concerning the incident, recommended that two counts of harassment be filed instead in a lower court. Harassment is a violation under state law, and does not result in a criminal record on the person charged.

The charges stemming from the incident, which occurred in the Town of Saugerties, will apparently be heard in Saugerties Town Court. Sheriff Thomas F. Mayone said Wednesday that Kaplan will be suspended with pay pending the outcome of court proceedings.

Mayone said previously, following the filing of the reckless endangerment charge, that he felt the deputy had "reasonable cause for pulling his gun." He said however, that he did not condone the deputy's action in chasing the car on his private vehicle.

Kaplan has served as a jail guard since being hired in May.

Meanwhile, in other grand jury matters:

Mary Ann Longue, 28, of 367 Hasbrouck Avenue, Kingston, was indicted on a charge of first degree criminal solicitation, a felony. She was arrested Oct. 17 by Ulster County sheriff's deputies on a charge of conspiracy to commit murder after allegedly attempting to hire an unidentified man to kill a relative in order to collect life insurance.

The conspiracy to commit murder charge was reduced to criminal solicitation charge following a preliminary hearing in October after it was found by the district attorney's office that there was insufficient evidence to warrant the more serious charge.

Veto Fight on Tax Bill

WASHINGTON — A veto fight between President Ford and Congress now will determine whether income taxes will rise early next year.

The groundwork was laid Wednesday when the Senate Finance Committee, with support from two of its seven Republicans, rejected Ford's call for a ceiling on federal spending. The committee then approved a six-month extension of 1975's lower tax rates.

Mediators on Hijacked Train

BEILEN, The Netherlands — Mediators boarded a hijacked train today at the request of South Moluccan gunmen who have been holding 29 hostages aboard for 10 days.

In Amsterdam an official said new contacts with another band holding about 25 prisoners in the Indonesian consulate were looking "not unfavorable."

Four South Moluccan community leaders boarded the hijacked train early this afternoon to talk to the gunmen for the first time in three days.

'Inexcusable' CIA Plot

WASHINGTON — Calling CIA plots to assassinate some foreign leaders "inexcusable and unauthorized activities," a high ranking Kennedy and Johnson administration official has told Congress some future covert actions might be necessary to check international terrorism and avoid nuclear danger.

McGeorge Bundy, former presidential adviser on national security, now head of the Ford Foundation, also told the House intelligence committee Wednesday sharp cuts in the CIA covert branch would improve its efficiency.

Leftists Advance in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Leftist militiamen, shrugging off a newly arranged cease-fire, seized three strategic hotels today in a thundering assault on right-wing forces and Lebanese army troops.

Bolstered by the capture of two armored cars from the Lebanese army, the leftists shoved the rightists and commandos back along the Beirut seafont — scene of the worst fighting in Lebanon's eight-month civil war.

CBS Gyp Is Nabbed

NEW ORLEANS — FBI agents have arrested an escaped convict who allegedly gyped the CBS television network out of $10,000 by promising to lead cameramen to the body of former Teamster boss James R. Hoffa.

Clarence N. Medlin, who claimed he was a former Hoffa bodyguard, was arrested without resistance Wednesday at a downtown motel. He was held without bail for return to a federal "halfway house" in Greensboro, N.C., where he had been serving a 10-year sentence for interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle.

CBS said the 49-year-old Medlin, who served time in prison with Hoffa in Lewisburg, Pa., claimed Hoffa was taken to Florida following his abduction July 30.

Spain Hit by Strike

MADRID, Spain — Thousands of industrial workers went on strike today to demand speedy political reforms and a general amnesty for political prisoners.

The action came as Prime minister Carlos Arias Navarro put the finishing touches on a new, more liberal cabinet.

Police cleared the halls of Madrid's Chrysler auto plant where 10,000 workers either failed to turn up for work or refused to man the assembly lines.

Marlow Hearing

BOICEVILLE

Dr. Frank Marlow has been granted a hearing before the Ontario Board of Education in the third week of January, 1976.

While final logistical details have not been concluded, it is anticipated the hearing on seven charges of administrative misfeasance will begin anywhere from 5 to 7:30 p.m., will be held at one of the Boiceville schools, and may take more than one session (they are tentatively scheduled to finish at 11 p.m.).

Both the board of education and Dr. Marlow reportedly are in agreement that the hearing be open to the public. Neither the education law nor Dr. Marlow's contract specify whether such a hearing must be public or private, according to one source.

The hearing itself will be conducted pretty much like a trial, with opening statements by attorneys for the board and for Dr. Marlow and numerous witnesses expected to testify on specific charges.

While Dr. Marlow's attorney Joseph Hill reportedly requested that the State Department of Education send a hearing officer to make recommendations, the board did not concur.

Support Welfare Cuts

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Republican legislative leaders, while rejecting most of Gov. Hugh L. Carey's proposals to close a hotly disputed $1.6 billion budget gap, have given tacit support to Carey's call for $140 million in welfare cuts.

In a presentation Wednesday designed to refute Carey's claim that large-scale cuts and $805 million in new taxes are needed over the next 15 months, the GOP leaders included the welfare cuts in their proposal.

Senate Majority Leader Warren M. Anderson, cautioning that Republicans were "not necessarily accepting the details" of Carey's proposed welfare cuts, said he "would lean more toward" the cuts proposed by Sen. William T. Smith, R-Big Flats, chairman of the Senate Social Services Committee.

However, a number of Carey's proposals were similar to Smith's.

"Even if you took the governor's horror story" of the mammoth deficit, Anderson said, cuts in welfare and other areas would help to make any tax increases unnecessary.

Anderson and Assembly Minority Leader Perry B. Duryea said cuts of $140 million in welfare, $60 million in other local assistance, $150 million in capital construction and $250 million in state operations could be used to close the gap. However, they offered no details of their proposals.

In addition to his welfare cuts, Carey Tuesday proposed $457 million in other budget-trimming.

Top Carey aides Wednesday outlined details of the governor's welfare cuts, emphasizing that localities would save an identical $140 million.

"There are 58 local social services districts in the state which are in terrible trouble," Social Services Commissioner Stephen Berger said. "There is enormous support for the governor's program out in the state."

Chief among Carey's cuts was $86 million from Medicaid, including $53 million to be saved by imposing limits on hospital, nursing home and clinic rates and limiting the length of stay of many patients.

Berger and Health Commissioner Robert Whalen said the current practice of allowing such institutions to recover their costs plus a profit in Medicaid payments gave the facilities no incentive to become more efficient.

However, the Hospital Association of New York State responded that the "proposed reductions could probably not be absorbed" by many hospitals.

"In New York State, the length of stay per patient is 9.8 days as opposed to 7.8 days nationwide," Whalen said, adding that daily costs for a patient averaged $140 in the state, compared to $113 nationally.

Another $11 million would be saved by cutting optional Medicaid services, such as podiatry, non-emergency adult dental care and some x-rays. Smith had recommended just such eliminations.

Even with the cuts, "We will still have the most elaborate Medicaid program of any state in the union," said Dr. Kevin Cahill, an advisor to the governor on health matters.

Other cuts, such as closing "about 3,000 excess" hospital beds by Whalen, were expected to save another $15 million. The health commissioner said, "An empty bed is like a vacuum — it will attract a patient."

Closing the Door

GOP legislative leaders, Warren Anderson, Senate Majority leader and Perry Duryea, Assembly Minority leader met with press Wednesday to announce the closing of the door on new taxes requested by Gov. Hugh Carey until 1976 regular lawmaking session, and propose a no-tax plan to close balance the state budget. (UPI)

'Instant Plan'

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Gov. Hugh L. Carey's "instant" lottery proposal is designed to answer critics of both the game's operation and its purpose.

Carey's legislation revamping of the lottery, disclosed Wednesday, would specifically earmark all profits from the game for special education.

It would also abolish the current lottery, shut down since Oct. 22, and create a new Division of the Lottery under the Department of Taxation and Finance.

When originally established in 1967, supporters claimed the game would bring in $300 million in increased funds for education each year.

However, lottery profits never exceeded $53.3 million a year, and the money has traditionally been ploughed back into the state's general fund. Backers maintain that if those funds were not there, that amount of education aid would not be available.

Carey estimated the new lottery would bring in about $70 million a year in state revenues, all of which would be earmarked specifically for special education.

A spokesman said the new game, if approved by the emergency session of the legislature, would not be in operation for at least two months. He said unfinished drawings in the old lottery would be completed by the end of the year.

Carey fired Lottery Director Jerry Bruno Nov. 28 and transferred or dismissed the lottery's 317 other employees in a thorough sweep-out of the agency.

An outside consulting agency had found "needless opportunities for fraud," lax security and "a variety of problems of a very serious nature" in the lottery.

Carey ordered the lottery suspended Oct. 22 after duplicate tickets were printed for at least one drawing.

Bruno, a former campaign advance man for Carey, claimed that he was being "sacrificed" while the state Racing and Wagering Board, overseeing the lottery, was actually responsible for most of the game's problems.

In a letter to the governor, Bruno called for an investigation of Racing and wagering, but a spokesman said Carey had no comment on the matter.

State Comptroller Arthur Levitt, in an audit of the troubled department, had pointed to the computer section of the Racing and Wagering Board as one of the problem areas, and called for more independence for the lottery director.

Under Carey's bill, the lottery would use the computers of the Tax Department, and the director would be given more independence.

State Taxes . . . A High Stakes Game

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Gov. Hugh L. Carey and Republican legislative leaders are locked in a high stakes game of tug-of-war over the issue of new state taxes. Caught in the middle is the fate of the Housing Finance Agency and a handful of other "moral obligation" agencies.

The HFA faces default Monday on $143 million in notes unless the money is found to satisfy its creditors. The Dormitory Agency needs $22 million before the end of the month and other agencies have smaller obligations.

Meanwhile, the on-again, off-again emergency session of the legislature was not expected to be called back into operation until Friday at the earliest.

Carey is trying to drag Republicans into the tax issue by insisting that the HFA's borrowing problems can only be solved as part of the state's own budget and credit difficulties.

On Wednesday, Carey produced a New York banker to endorse his plan of taxes and state spending cuts to close the disputed state budget gap.

Senate Majority Leader Warren M. Anderson and Assembly Minority Leader Perry B. Duryea held a news conference to announce an alternative no-tax budget balancing plan that would spread a state deficit — whatever size is finally agreed upon — over the next three years.

The banker, Elmor C. Patterson of Morgan Guaranty, said restoration of the state's credit depended on a balanced budget.

"The balance must be achieved," he said, "with a mix of increased revenues and reduced expenditures."

However, the impact of his statement was diluted somewhat when he admitted to reporters that he had not seen the Republicans' no-tax solution.

Carey also spent part of the day in Washington appealing to Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns for some sort of short-term help in averting an agency default.

"Dr. Burns only said that he would agree to study the problem," Carey said on his return to the Capitol.

Although a spokesman for Anderson admitted privately that the senator might eventually agree to a much-scaled-down tax program if it were linked inextricably with the agency problem, the GOP appeared ready to hold out on the tax issue until after Carey presents his 1976-77 budget in late January.

With Carey's proposed spending document in hand, the Republican strategy goes, legislative leaders would have a stronger hand in reducing state spending, which is beginning to appear as the only certainty in a rather muddled and partisan budget dispute.

The Republican plan called for holding state expenditures through April 1978 below revenues expected from the current tax structure.

By contrast, Carey's 15-month plan proposed spending $10.9 billion next year, an increase of $300 million over current expenditures.

Carey said the new taxes would be necessary to avoid drastic cuts in state operations and the firing of 10,000 state employees. The GOP proposed spreading the deficit over the next three years, providing enough time for growth in the existing tax structure to take care of the shortage.

Both plans called for approximately $600 million in state spending cuts next year, which would translate into the loss of 6,000 to 8,000 state jobs — Carey says through attrition.

Duryea estimated approval of the taxes proposed by the Democratic governor "would produce a $1 billion surplus" by the end of the next state year.

"Mr. Carey wants to have a cushion built up," Anderson said. "I think he is looking ahead to 1978" when the governor faces re-election.

Duryea offered an example of how GOP leaders are reading public opinion on the tax issue:

"I'm saying to the harrassed resident of New York just what the harrassed resident of New York has been saying to me," Duryea said. "He wants the state government to face reality as have many other state governments in the country."

"He's saying, 'Don't increase state taxes, let me live a little,'" Duryea said.

Carey said he was asking taxpayers to "shoulder their share of the responsibility in halting the decline into insolvency and in putting the state government back on the solid ground of an honestly balanced budget."

Both Carey and the Republicans called for $140 million in welfare cuts.

Carey also proposed a $92 million reduction in aid to localities and a $110 million cut in school aid.

15-Year-Old Case Nears End

POUGHKEEPSIE

State police in New York and Connecticut hope to clear up two murders from 1960 and 1969 with a case against a 31-year-old Thompson, Conn., man in jail on another charge.

Troopers got murder warrants Wednesday against Richard Delage, whom they believe responsible for a highly publicized slaying 15 years ago just off the heavily traveled Taconic Parkway in Yorktown, Westchester County.

The victim was a 23-year-old North Troy schoolteacher Carol Segretta. Delage was 15 at the time.

Major Philip G. Emden, commander of New York State Police Troop K headquartered in Millbrook, identified the suspect as Delage, presently being held in the Whiting Forensic Institute at Connecticut Valley Hospital, Middletown, Conn. on kidnaping and assault charges on a woman hitchhiker Oct. 3 of this year. He was transferred to the hospital Wednesday from Connecticut's Brooklyn Correctional Center.

Delage is charged in Connecticut with the slaying of Paget Weatherly, 23, a University of Connecticut graduate student found shot to death Nov. 16, 1969.

Both Miss Segretta and Miss Weatherly, a graduate of St. Lawrence University, were killed with a .32 caliber pistol, according to police. Miss Segretta was shot four times in the head and neck, and Miss Weatherly was shot three times in the chest.

The connection came when police questioned Delage following his Connecticut arrest this year. Said Major Emden, Delage "admitted certain facts about the death of the school teacher." Discussions will be held regarding extradition to New York on murder charges.

Emden stated that when Delage allegedly shot Miss Segretta he was 15 days shy of his 16th birthday. In 1960, state law was changed to include 15-year-olds as adults in certain cases when they were convicted of an act punishable by either life imprisonment or death, he said.

The investigation for 15 years was handled in conjunction with the Westchester County district attorney's office.

Burglary

Kingston police Wednesday night reportedly stopped a burglary in progress at Sears Department Store, Kingston Plaza.

Charged with third degree burglary, third degree grand larceny, and possession of burglary tools was Brian M. Baird, 18, of 168 Harwich Street, Kingston.

Detectives charged that Baird at about 11:30 p.m. forced entry to Sears by breaking the glass in a rear door with a crow bar and attempted to flee with 11 leather coats from the men's shop valued at $1,067. He was reportedly arrested on the premises by Detective Sgt. Ellsworth, and was scheduled for a City Court appearance today.

Beacon Fire

Four Beacon firemen were knocked down by a falling ceiling at the Penn Central Railroad station early Thursday morning while battling a blaze, but none were hurt seriously.

According to Fire Chief Dennis Leahy of this Dutchess County city, a storage room in a brick building facing the river was totally gutted by fire. He had "no idea" of the fire's cause. It took firemen from 4 to 6 a.m. to quell the blaze.

Leahy said four firemen were knocked down when they entered the storage room as the entire ceiling collapsed on them. Two were taken to the hospital for X-rays, complaining of back and neck pains.

Brown, Dr. Reppert Named

By Jon Powers

GREENWOOD LAKE

Robert T. Brown, president of Ulster County Community College, and Dr. Edmund H. Reppert, former president of the Ulster County Medical Society, have been named to the 30-member Board of Directors of the Hudson Valley Health Systems Agency (HSA).

The appointments were announced Wednesday by Peter J. Savago, chairman of the Ulster County Legislature, at the final meeting of the HSA Task Force at the Sterling Forest Conference Center in Southern Orange County. Leaders of the other six counties that comprise Hudson Valley HSA also announced their appointments to the board on Wednesday.

HSA, mandated by the 1974 federal Health Planning and Resources Development Act, will be responsible for guiding the expenditures of all federal funds in the areas of public health and mental health services, including construction of new facilities and the implementation of new programs in the seven-county area.

The Board of Directors will be the governing body for Hudson Valley HSA. Each county is represented on the board, with counties with the largest population having the greatest representation.

Ulster County will have three seats on the Board of Directors. Savago said Wednesday that he will announce his third appointment shortly.

In addition to the regularly appointed county representatives, there will be four at-large seats on the board: one representing the New York University Medical College, which has its research facility in Orange County; one representing the regional hospital association; and two one-year seats that will be rotated among the seven counties.

Hudson Valley HSA is one of eight such units created in New York State and 200 created across the country. Its duties and powers will include:

- Development of a short and long term plan for health care delivery within the region, and implementation of the plan.
- Make grants and contracts to public, non-profit entities and individuals for health services.
- Review, and approve or disapprove, each proposal for the use of federal funds and mental health and alcohol rehabilitation purposes.
- Review and make recommendations for the need for new institutional health services proposed to be offered or developed in the HSA area.
- Annually recommend projects for the modernization, construction and conversion of medical facilities in the area.
- Administer construction aid to hospitals under the federal Hill-Burton Act. Agencies that currently administer such funding programs will be phased out by June 30, 1976.

The groundwork for implementation of HSA was laid by a Hudson Valley Task Force comprised of representatives from each county. Wednesday's meeting at Sterling Forest marked the dissolution of the task force and the formal creation of the Health Systems Agency.

Two public hearings on HSA will be held before the agency begins its work: Dec. 17 at 8 p.m. at North Junior High School in Newburgh; Dec. 18 at 8 p.m. at the County Center in White Plains.

The participating counties include Ulster, Orange, Rockland, Westchester, Dutchess, Putnam and Sullivan. Northern Dutchess Hospital administrator Michael Mazzarella was among those appointed to the board by Dutchess County Executive William Bartles.

A Christmas Reminder

Just two weeks before Christmas
And all through the mall,
Hardly a shopper remembered
Yule precautions at all.

He said a well-practiced thief
So cunning and deft,
Broke into the car
And stole every gift.

Packages were stacked
In the car with such care,
It was hard to believe
They wouldn't be there.

More rapid than eagles
My curses they came,
And I ranted and yelled
To the thief hurled a name.

The children were home
And safe in their beds,
With visions of new toys
Filling their heads.

The policeman was helpful
And sympathized some,
But noted I erred
In what I had done.

Ma with her gift wraps
And I with the sack,
Had just begun talking
Of the car drive back.

The presents had lain
In wide-open view,
And the doors were unlocked
That's another don't do.

When out in the lot
There arose such a clatter,
We raced to the car
To see what was the matter.

Each year the police
They warn to take heed,
I had ignored them
Full of trust and Godspeed.

Blue lights on the breast
Of the new fallen snow,
Gave the impression of trouble
To objects below.

The boxes and bags
Go well out of sight,
The car should be locked
And parked near a light.

When what should our wondering
Eyes there espy,
But an empty back seat
And a policeman nearby.

The policeman exclaimed
As he drove out of sight,
"A Merry Christmas to all
If you just play it right."

Editor, The Freeman:
When a baseball or a football team loses 87 decisions in a row, this can be likened to the City of Kingston's latest loss in assessed valuations necessitating the issuance of a 10-year bond close to $630,000. There is an indication from the corporation counsel that there are tremendous amounts of further amounts to be paid of certiorari that if judgments are decided against the City, as they have been in the past, will result in further loss of revenue.

In the past these reductions have always favored those protesting, rendered by judges that have been making decisions from their desks and never inspecting the properties involved. The New York State Assessors Manual sets forth the following basic approaches to valuation of real property:

- (1) Capitalization of income.
- (2) Comparative sales and other market indicators.
- (3) Replacement cost methods.

What is value?
The present worth of all rights for future benefits arriving from the ownership of properties. There is a large variety of terms devised to limit the meaning of value to the particular field of interest being served. Such terms as fair, actual, market, liquidation, book, going concern, economic reproduction, taxable value, and many others are in common usage. The existence of all these descriptive adjectives of value should be sufficient indication of the necessity for understanding the particular sense that "value" has in the field of property assessment is really an exchange value present under ideal conditions — a value which would be the same in all cases under identical circumstances and at the same time. The most incongruous decisions in my opinion as a former Assessor was a repayment of $585,000 to the Hudson Cement Company. The assessment which we levied on them and which has been protested by Hudson Cement is not enough, and the City can produce a valuation that will more than justify a greater levy and that together with Mr. Donnaruma's expert opinion rendered when I was in office will hear this out.

When I requested the State Board of Equalization of Assessments to make up their evaluation of the plant, excluding personal property, they were denied admission to the plant by the management. The Kingston Plaza was assessed by an expert, and they received a fair assessment. Both Hillcrest Gardens and Parkview Terrace requested reductions verbally when I was Assessor, and I asked of them a listing of the leases and a financial statement. This was never supplied to me. And furthermore, the property of 62-68 Ten Broeck Avenue is boarded up. However, if efforts have been made to sell or rent the building, there is no justification for a reduction of $15,300.

My suggestion is that appeals to the courts for a review of all of these malcontents requests for a reduction and a request at the same time for a review of all of these malcontents requests for a review by the State Board of Equalization and Assessments. There is a rule of thumb that for every $40,000 loss of assessments it results in a one dollar increase in the tax rate. Since Ulster County has to absorb losses of $10,000 and over in assessments and refund 15 per cent of that amount to the City of Kingston plus 3 per cent interest, their refunds would seriously affect both city and county taxes for 1976. It is essential that the city protest most vigorously these abstruse decisions, and it would seem to me the City of Kingston never wins certiorari proceedings, and the decisions by the courts are egregious. However, in New York City the certiorari decisions are evenly divided that is for and against the City of New York. There is no fairness in the rendered judges decisions in the City of Kingston, since we have never won an award in the city's favor.

This is not a succinct report, but the expressions of an opinion of an irate taxpayer.

Be More Factual

Editor, The Freeman:
This letter is written in reply to C.W. Laurito, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Galitzky, and Miss Jill Robinson of the S.P.C.A.

The S.P.C.A. drew first blood on Oct. 12, 1975 on the front page of the Daily Freeman about Archers. The facts were misquoted then and now on Dec. 2 a letter to the Editor from Jill Robinson and Mary Russell admits the figure of 8,000 animals per year was incorrect.

I wonder if putting in a new well, rewiring the building, digging up concrete floors and replacing them to insure proper drainage and putting on a new roof would cost anywhere near $150,000. If the S.P.C.A. members named above would be more factual the public and myself just might understand their problem.

I am wondering if C.W. Laurito, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Galitzky, and Miss Jill Robinson ever heard the saying the girls who cried wolves and there were no wolves and then when there was a wolf, nobody believed them any more.

Sportingly yours

Present for C-H

Editor, The Freeman:
Once again, Christmas came a few weeks earlier for Central Hudson.

Last year, on Dec. 1, this private utility was given a $12,177,000 rate increase. Last week, the Public Service Commission (PSC or Private Santa Claus) gave them a Christmas gift of a $3,255,000 rate increase, despite the admission by Central Hudson that they had received a $5,000,000 income tax refund a few months after last year's Christmas present.

Can you picture a forthcoming TV commercial: "Who needs the PSC?" asks the announcer. "We do," shout a handful of privately owned utilities, waving their income tax refund checks. Maybe that will be followed by another TV commercial: "Who needs the PSC?" asks the announcer. "WE DON'T!" shout millions of voters waving their empty wallets.

Yale Finds Inflation

By William F. Buckley Jr.

Mr. Kingman Brewster, the President of Yale University, found himself safely in England the other day, out of range of the KIDS' DEWLINE which, round the clock, catches orthodox blips from educational officials and launches deadly missiles against the offenders. Accordingly Mr. Brewster talked to the English Speaking Union in London about problems which, up until now, have been associated in the public mind as problems only the troglodytes worry about. Such problems as overspending, the shortage of capital, the heavy cost of bureaucracy, and, above all, the irresponsibility of Congress.

It is sobering to contemplate that not one of the politicians — or professors — President Brewster is normally linked with could have guessed, reading this speech, who delivered it.

Mr. Brewster said that "The inflationary bias of representative government seems to me the greatest threat to the survival of a democratic political economy." That statement is worthy of having been written by, well, myself.

"We need," said the President of the University that teaches its students for the most part to scoff at the dangers of inflation and to support such massive increases in state welfarism as were most recently championed by George McGovern, "some higher law to restrain the natural temptation of use the spending power for political self-perpetuation. If we do not solve this problem, representative government will drive us up to altitudes of inflation which, like anoxia above 14,000 feet, will not be able to sustain productive economic life."

Then came the clincher. "Until we can devise ways by which the inflationary consequence of a Congressman's vote is traced to him with the same particularity which attaches to a yea or nay on a revenue bill, we will not cure the disease of public spending motivated by the desire to achieve re-election."

Mr. Brewster's warning is timely. The President last fall asked for a reduction in taxes but only if tied to a reduction in spending. The Executive and the Congress are now engaged in an elaborate and complicated exchange, the purpose of which is to blame the other party. Because of such advantages as Mr. Brewster speaks of, Congress is likely to escape the blame, and turn an angry public against not itself, but the President.

Professor Ernest van den Haag of New York has advanced the novel notion which, if explored, might provide such countervailing pressures as Mr. Brewster calls for. The President should "refuse" to borrow the money needed to pay for deficit federal programs. As things generally go, Congress passes a tax bill which will bring in Revenue X. Then it passes a spending bill which authorizes Expenditure Y. Y is almost always larger than X. The President has the authority to borrow, through the Federal Reserve system, the differential.

What if he would refuse?

Congress would have to permit the Executive to trim expenditures. Or else it would have to order the President to borrow, bringing on more inflation. In doing so, it would become far more exposed than it is now. Individual inflationists might then be traceable with that requisite "particularity" proposed by Kingman Brewster.

No doubt there are other means. Since we are to have highly elaborated Election Laws, perhaps, picking up the theme of consumer protection, we should require all candidates to list after their names the percentage over revenue for which they voted appropriations, so that for instance, one would routinely refer to "Mrs. Bella Abzug (D-N.Y.-50): meaning that she had voted to spend half again as much money as she voted to tax.

Meanwhile, the sunburst of Mr. Brewster lights the skies, and we pray that having discovered the light, he will one day soon discover the truth.

Medical Advances Could Mean Pain

WASHINGTON — The Medical Scandal for the month of December is the announcement of a high correlation between taking estrogen hormones and getting cancer of the uterus. An estimated 25 million prescriptions for this stuff are written by doctors who can't be sued for killing and injuring the women they've sickened.

Prescribing estrogen hormones for menopause isn't malpractice. It's ethical practice, and, if you happen to come down with what are ghoulishly called side effects, tough on you, sister, we'll cut your uterus out. You're over the hill and into menopause so what do you need it for, and, while we've got you open, we might as well grab an appendix and a couple of other minor organs. Three-for-one bargain days in surgery.

This estrogen hormone business is especially frightening and infuriating because it is being administered to women who may be suffering from a doctor-invented, fictional disease. The suspicion is abroad that the syndrome doctors associate with menopause may more accurately reflect their own opinion of women than anything real troubling their patients

The more advanced thinkers in the profession have dispensed with the need to invent a disorder before strapping their patients on an operating table. Physicians exist who now recommend the ovaries be cut out and breasts be chopped off of teen-aged women simply on the basis that a number of their nearest female relatives have come down with cancer of these organs. Preemptive surgery. Surprise attack on cancer. Hit it while its bombers are still on the ground.

Removing the organs of the healthy for preventive reasons offers the further advantage of making any rational examination of the procedure impossible. Removing a cancerous uterus at least allows us to compare this form of therapy with some other. The preemptive surgical strike precludes any scientific testing of the validity of this new form of medical warfare.

Besides inventing diseases and disorders not known to nature, beyond maiming and poisoning the healthy, there is the question of medical practices which may not do any harm but which may not do any good or need not be done in a professional medical setting. Screw it as it may sound, there are a goodly number of commonly used tests, therapies and procedures, the efficacies of which are either seriously disputed or just not established.

House Panel Bugged By USSR Device

By Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — A miniature electronic "bug," which dropped from a slit cut in the lining of a chair in a House hearing room, has been traced by the FBI to the Soviet Union.

The tiny listening device was discovered in 1973 in the ornate sanctum of the House International Relations Committee. The battery was dead, but it could have been operating during delicate discussions of the SALT disarmament talks, military aid and the Vietnam withdrawal.

Chairman Thomas Morgan, D-Pa., immediately dispatched the mysterious device to the FBI for study. FBI experts painstakingly disassembled the tiny parts and traced them to their country of origin.

The batteries clearly had been purchased in Great Britain. But the experts discovered telltale marks which convinced them the device was made in Russia. They even tried to trace the metallic and crystal parts to the Soviet Union mines where they were mined.

The FBI was unable to determine, however, who had actually planted the tiny microtransmitter. But the G-men reported to Morgan that the bug definitely was an espionage device.

As a result, Morgan urged House Speaker Carl Albert to take extraordinary steps to debug three other supersensitive hearing rooms used by the Appropriations, Armed Services and Joint Atomic Energy committees.

To give the FBI more maneuverability to locate the culprits and to avoid upsetting the Soviet-U.S. detente, no public mention was made of the espionage device's Soviet link. The story has been suppressed until now.

Footnote: Chairman Morgan would confirm only that the bug contained "no U.S. parts," was "dead" upon discovery but, for months, could have picked up anything that was said in the hearing room.

PEOPLE POISONING: Federal officials have sidetracked an alarming study, which warns that lead from auto emissions probably damages the blood and nervous systems of young children.

The concealment of the report occurred at the same time that the nation's foremost producer of leaded gasoline, Ethyl, is suing in the federal appeals court to curtail the government's powers to restrict lead emissions.

This makes the secretiveness all the more dangerous, because the study by the prestigious Center for Disease and Control could be crucial to the court case.

The center, which is part of the Health, Education and Welfare Department, warns that children exposed to concentrated auto exhaust are highly vulnerable to the lead smog.

The "lead is very likely a contributing cause of damage to the neurologic and psychologic development of children," declares the report. The lead spray from auto exhausts also poisons red blood cells, slows nerve reaction, causes "muscular weakness," reduces IQ and causes "poor school performance (and) behavioral hyperactivity."

Yet instead of taking immediate action to save the health of the endangered children, the federal authorities deliberately dillydallied. The financial interest of the gasoline producers, in other words, was put ahead of the welfare of the children.

The center's director, Dr. David Sencer, wanted to alert the Environmental Protection Agency at once last June. The EPA has the power to force producers to reduce the lead in gasoline.

The subcommittee chairman was none other than Dr. Lloyd Tepper, an associate food and drug commissioner, who once did paid consulting for the lead industry. He also played the principal role in preparing a study that soft-pedaled the poisonous effects of airborne lead.

Tepper vehemently defended his fair-mindedness and declared it was correct to withhold the disturbing study from EPA. His subcommittee report, he promised, will be pushed expeditiously.

But meanwhile, the buildup of lead in children's bodies has continued for almost six months since the center tried to alert the EPA.

Footnote: The Public Interest Campaign, a consumer group dealing with airborne lead, has called for Tepper to step down as chairman of the lead subcommittee.

CORRECTION: In reporting the cost of new uniforms that the Marine Corps is testing, we misunderstood the figures which a spokesman gave us. We understated each uniform cost between $728 to $1,326, which would add up to a total of $27,000.

The Marine Corps now points out that the $1,326 purchased 13 Suraleme uniforms and the $728 bought seven gabardine uniforms. With a few extras, the total expenditure was $2277.

We are happy to correct the figures.

Berry's World

Terrorism In Israel... Murder: The Neighbor Next Door

By Phyllis and Herb Kamm

(Third in a series)

METULLA, Israel (NEA) — What is it like to live with murder as your "neighbor," as it is for thousands of families in Israel who have taken up homes within shouting — and shooting — distance of Arab borders?

Suppose you are an American who pulled up roots and made Israel your home.

What is it like?

Let two young transplanted Americans tell you.

Even while the streets of Beirut, Lebanon, 50 miles northwest of this village, are exploding with internecine warfare, Palestinian terrorists continue their incursions across the border into Israel.

The danger is always there. The sublimated fear lurks in the shadows of the mind, like the terrorists slinking into the darkness of the nearby orchards hoping to strike at the villagers.

"I don't want to say it's something you get used to. But it's not the uppermost thing in everybody's minds. You know, everybody sort of lives their lives. When I go up to the orchards I'm on the road next to the border fence. I take a firearm with me. Maybe the chances are one in a million something might happen. But if there is that chance, you take the gun."

Sandy-haired Eric Jacobs, 29, soft-spoken, pragmatic, B.A. in philosophy, born and raised in Boulder, Colo. with little Jewish training and no Zionist inclinations, shrugged, accepting the reality facing his family and their neighbors in Metulla. Metulla is an agricultural village of a few hundred families, the northernmost point of Israel nestled against the Lebanese border.

His dark-haired wife Rivka, 30, chubby, pleasant faced, M. in English literature, comes from a traditional Jewish home in Utica, N.Y. They met as students at the University of Rochester. They now live with their two small children in a snug little home some 100 yards from the border of Lebanon, beyond which Arab terrorists wait for the chance to strike.

Eric and Rivka spoke to us in their den. It is a booklined room, comfortable, cozy. But there are no windows and the outer walls are encased in eight inches of concrete — an extra inch or so more on the roof.

This is the security room, a part of every house near the border of an Arab country. It is the room where the children sleep and where Rivka joins them to comfort them and allay their fears on nights when Eric is on border patrol and there is a terrorist alert, or the boom of Israeli artillery is frighteningly amplified by the surrounding hills of Lebanon and Israel. It is a room built to withstand shelling from across the border.

The young mother was asked about the psychological impact on the constant tension on the children, Yael, 4, a snub-nosed, pigtailed shy little girl, and Joshua, 5, alert and eager.

"If you raise your children in a dangerous city, they've got in some way to have some fear of people, or some fear of being alone or walking by themselves," said Rivka. "Our kids' fears are not any deep psychological thing. They know what they're afraid of. When the shooting starts they're afraid and that's all there is to it."

"And we do the best we can to cope with it. I think it's a bad psychology to grab your kids and run. I think it's a bad education for the children and I think it's silly. Our approach is to try to make them accept it and get used to it. But of course you never get used to it."

But they do accept it and often laugh about it. When we asked how the alert is sounded, Rivka chuckled and said the neighbors get out and yell as loud as they can, "Hey, Eric, Eric." You can see it's a very sophisticated system. And one night when terrorists were nearby, a member of the patrol called reassuringly to her neighbor. "Don't worry, Ora. It's only terrorists."

And little Joshua haltingly recalls, with wide eyes, the night a Katusha (Russian-made) rocket fell in the town. He tries to tell the story but never finishes. The wide blue eyes finish it for him.

Like their neighbors — some newcomers like themselves, others third and fourth generations in Metulla — the Jacobs are always mindful of the dangers but there is a healthy, lightheartedness about their lives as Israelis, an eagerness to face the challenges head on.

They enjoy their jobs as teachers and fruit farmers. Eric works at a high school in Kiryat Shmona nine miles away, the target of a terrorist attack last year. Rivka teaches at a grade school in a village close by. They are infused with a sense of participation in a vital society.

They have their comfortable, modern home purchased at a minimal cost under the program for new settlers. They also have 10 dunams (2.5 acres) of apple, plum and peach orchards that were planted by the Jewish Agency which sends someone to guide the tyro farmers, who would never get this type of opportunity in the States.

This is the Jacobs' fourth year in Metulla, their seventh in Israel. It is the first year their orchards produced a salable crop — 20 tons of fruit. Eventually these 2.5 acres will be capable of producing 75 to 100 tons of fruit a year.

They came because one very cold January morning in upstate New York Eric asked Rivka: "What the hell are we doing here?" They had more or less mapped out their lives to get PhDs, to be teachers, to buy a house, etc., etc. "We looked at each other," Eric told us, "and decided we didn't want it."

It's obvious they found what they want — or almost. They hope that some day, for both Arab and Jew, the border will be open and free as it was from the earliest settlement in 1896 until the 1967 war, when relationships were good, when farmers on both sides of the border exchanged agricultural know how and family chit-chat in each other's homes.

SIEGEL, SHUSTER AND THE MAN

(UPI)

A Job for Superman

NEW YORK (UPI) — The creators of "Superman" — two elderly men struggling for a living — say they don't like the offer of a "pension-type stipend" from the current owners of the rights to the "Man of Steel."

Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster, both 61, have been offered $15,000 a year each for life by Warner Communications, Inc., but they said Tuesday they want compensation equal to the average wage of working cartoonists, about $25,000 annually.

Siegel and Shuster said they signed away their rights to royalties on Superman for $65 apiece in 1938.

Siegel, now unemployed and blind in one eye, lives alone in an apartment in New York and is supported by his brother Shuster.

Shuster lives with his wife and daughter in West Los Angeles and makes $7,000 a year as a clerk-typist for the state.

New York Daily News sports cartoonist Bill Gallo, president of the National Cartoonists Society, told a news conference Tuesday.

"We are shocked that the proprietors of Superman refuse to share a fair part of the millions Siegel and Shuster's creation have spawned."

Jay Emmet, a Warner vice president, said the firm bought the rights to Superman in 1970. He said Shuster and Siegel have until today to accept the company's offer.

"We have no legal obligation," Emmet said, "but certainly we feel that from a moral point of view we should do something and we have worked out a pension type plan."

But Shuster and Siegel, besides asking for the larger sum, also said they want some guarantees for their families after they die.

They said they thought up the character of Superman in 1933 after watching a movie starring Douglas Fairbanks Sr. — but it took five years to peddle the idea of "Clark Kent," the mild-mannered reporter who fights a never-ending battle for Truth, Justice and the American Way.

They finally signed a contract with Action Comics in 1938.

"They said they would take good care of us. We trusted and relied on them," Shuster said.

The two men said they earned about $400,000 between 1938 and 1948 from the Superman character, primarily from newspaper syndication. Shuster said they never made a dime from the television series, movies, toys and T-shirts based on their branchchild.

Letters to Santa

HELSENKI, Finland (UPI) — The world's children are writing to Santa Claus in record numbers this year, and 19 of his helpers are working overtime to make sure each letter is answered.

Although the children know they must be good to receive presents from Santa, the letter from Augi Cassidy of St. Joseph, Mo., summed up the situation: "I know I have been pretty bad at times, but I wish I could have a few things," she wrote.

Michael Sutton of East Morsey, England, added an enticement for Santa's visit: "I will leave you a glass of gin and some chocolate," he wrote.

The letters were among thousands received from around the world. Many post offices, that receive mail addressed to Santa Claus at the North Pole, Reindeer Land or other exotic places send the letters to Finland.

The Helsinki Post Office gives them to the Finnish Tourist Board, which has produced a letter with Santa's own handwriting, pictures of him and a puzzle on the reverse side.

Santa's letter concludes, "Together with all my Christmas elves, I wish you and your friends and family a really good and merry Christmas."

Santa also hopes that the gay and friendly spirit of Christmas will continue long after Christmas as well — right up to the following Christmas.

The tourist board estimates it will answer at least 30,000 letters this year, with about half coming from Finland.

About 1,500 letters arrive daily and 10,000 have already been answered.

Last year the board replied to 10,000 foreign letters.

LONDON (UPI) — Spurned by his mother and stepfather in Israel, a 12-year old English boy returned to Britain today for adoption by an uncle.

Lee Borrett, 12, had plaintively asked, "Why does nobody want me?" when he was left to fend for himself in a strange country before he finally found someone to take him in.

The brown-eyed youngster got a lift on the flight to London from actor Chaim Topol of "Fiddler on the Roof" fame, who talked to him and cracked jokes as part of the VIP treatment to try to cheer him up.

The uncle, truck driver Christopher McArdle, was at Heathrow airport to meet the boy. He said he would adopt him if that was the only solution, as it appeared to be.

Borrett had arrived in Israel Sunday to be reunited with his mother, who had remarried there. His father left her before he was born. The boy had been living with his grandmother.

But the reception in Israel was cold and prompted the boy to ask, "Why does nobody want me?"

His stepfather, engineer David Bromand, 39, met him at Israel's Lod airport, pushed some money down his shirt and, according to witnesses, said "I don't want you. I'm not interested in you."

The boy's mother, Angela, said "he has got to go home. He must go back. My husband will not allow Lee to stay here. He is not Lee's father and he wants him to finish his education in England."

The grandmother had paid the one-way ticket to Israel because the boy pined for his mother. A ground hostess for El Al Airlines took him in until his return to Britain.

The uncle said "I am deeply shocked about this situation. Lee is a most lovable boy and we had no idea that he was going to be rejected." McArdle sent a telegram to El Al Airlines from his home in England Tuesday saying he would be willing to accept the boy and would not put him in an orphanage.

For Lee, it's been a bewildering three days. "Why does nobody want me?" the newspaper Ha'aretz quoted Lee as saying.

British Vice Consul Jean Murdock managed to contact Lee's mother — whose name was not released — and spent four hours convincing her to see her son.

The unwanted boy and the reluctant mother met at the airport Tuesday and spent the night together at a Tel Aviv hotel.

A reporter who witnessed the reunion said the mother's first words were, "Hi, Lee. You look nice. How are you?"

Bikini Thesis Rejected

BEAUMONT, Tex. (UPI) — A coed's master's thesis which included a photo of her sighting celestial bodies while wearing a bikini has been rejected a second time.

University officials complained that the picture showed too much of her own body.

Lamar University math major Kathryn King was told to remove the photo of herself the first time she submitted the paper to department heads.

She has refused, saying the picture of her demonstrating a sextant was too important to delete and her thesis was rejected for the second time Tuesday.

"I have met all scientifically sound objections," Miss King said. "But I have refused to substitute another photograph for the one in which I am wearing a bathing suit while engaged in celestial observatory work."

"This is supposed to be a university and not a Victorian finishing school. If the photograph of me wearing an ordinary swimsuit causes improper thoughts in the minds of university officials, then the burden rests with them to repair the condition of their minds."

Bad Manners, But Very Smart Politics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It is not hard to figure out what Gov. George Wallace was up to when he delivered a colloquial snub to his colleagues of the Democratic Governors Conference earlier this month. He was using them in his presidential campaign.

Wallace, along with nine other announced candidates for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, accepted an invitation to appear before the governors at their winter meeting Dec. 2. Everyone showed up except Wallace.

Had the Alabama governor made a diplomatic excuse when he was invited or even as late as the day of the conference, little could be made of his non-appearance. Like any candidate, he has the right to campaign in his own way and under conditions he believes best for himself.

But Wallace flew all the way from Montgomery to Washington in time for lunch with the governors the day of the conference and then failed to show up for the candidate forum four hours later with the explanation that he was "preoccupied" at his hotel on state business.

It would be difficult to construe Wallace's refusal to appear before his colleagues as anything but a deliberate act of nose thumbing. And it is not hard to guess why the Alabamian did it.

Wallace, like Ronald Reagan, is running for president as an antipolitical. His campaign strategy is to sell the idea that he is different from the stereotype politician who talks "down home" to the voters and then forgets all about them when he wins the election.

The candidate, even when he already holds public office, does everything he can to identify himself with the beleaguered citizen in a "them against us" view of the world.

This approach used to be surefire politics in rural areas, but today's more sophisticated voter needs to see more than the candidate in his shirtsleeves to believe he is different from the rest.

Wallace's performance at the governor's conference was a real life demonstration that he cares nothing for the approval of the political establishment.

By making clear that he could be at the conference and then refusing to come, Wallace simply dramatized his independence from what Reagan calls the political "buddy system."

The interesting part of the episode is the fact that while Wallace snubbed the governors, he had another reason for coming to Washington that made the trip worthwhile to him.

The day after his appearance at the candidate's forum, he was scheduled to participate in a private luncheon with a select group of reporters and confer with the editorial board of a national newsmagazine in Washington.

All that indicates is that while Wallace feels he can get along just fine without the goodwill of his fellow politicians, he still sees some value in courting the establishment press.

Which in turn demonstrates another axiom of old fashioned politics: write whatever you want about me, but spell my name right.

Godfrey Knew Something Was Wrong

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) Actor and comedian Godfrey Cambridge knew something was wrong when his foot went through the living room floor of his $125,000 home.

Cambridge became more than concerned when he peeked through the rotting floor and found that his just-purchased Ridgefield home did not have the full basement as advertised.

Now, 13 months after he moved his family from New York City to the "peace and quiet" of western Connecticut, Cambridge's complaints that the house was a lemon have been partially upheld by the state Real Estate Commission.

The three agents involved in the sale of the 15-room house to the black entertainer say they will appeal license suspensions ordered after the commission ruled they misrepresented the condition of the house.

The ruling came after four days of hearings last summer that erupted at times into shouted accusations between the real estate agents, their lawyers and Cambridge's outspoken wife, Audrey.

"I'm happy with the decision, but I wish it were longer," Cambridge said of the suspensions.

"It's the first time I've ever come up with a victory," said Cambridge, who figures he has spent almost as much to repair the house as it cost originally. "But I don't feel like riding off like a cowboy into the sunset," he said.

Cambridge who earlier complained of vandalism and threats to his wife and two teenage daughters, said some of the problems he found in the home were leaking toilets and sinks and broken appliances.

However, the commission held the agents responsible for only two items in his long list of complaints. They were claims that the house had all hardwood floors and a full basement.

Cambridge said he found the living room had plywood floors when he fell through a rotted portion as he and his wife surveyed the view from a large window shortly after they moved in. He said much of the basement has merely crawl space.

The four days of hearings that included dozens of witnesses and thousands of pages of documents and testimony, were the longest in the commission's history.

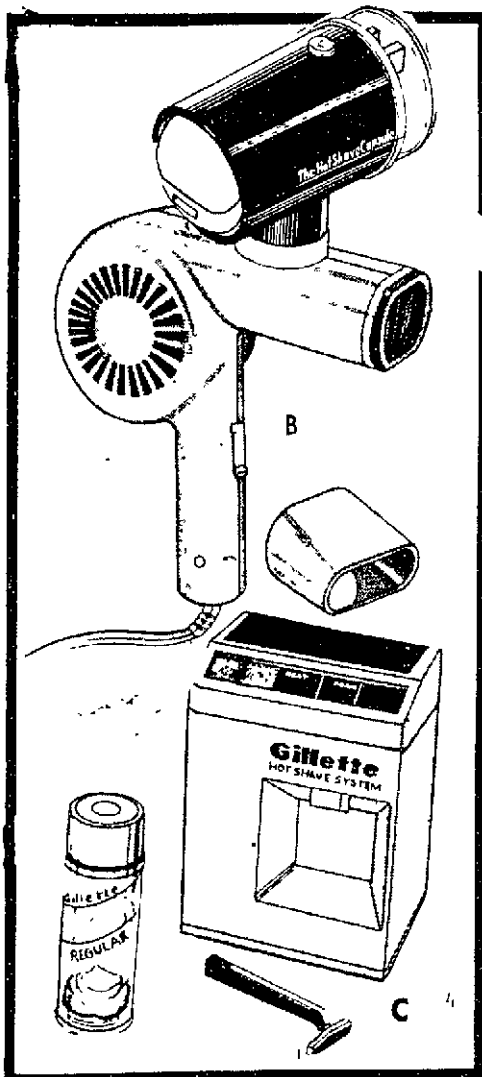

The commission suspended for 60 days the license of Richard D. Walter, the manager of the Ridgefield office of American Realty Co.

The license of the owner of the firm, Joseph H. Belin, and a former agent of the firm, Norma E. Forcelli, were suspended for 30 days. The firm's license was also suspended for 30 days.

D&H Canal . . . 'An Object of Historic Curiosity'

NEW PALTZ

The first million dollar privately owned enterprise in the United States, once vitally important to the economy of a portion of New York State and Pennsylvania, is today an object of curiosity for history buffs

The story of the Delaware and Hudson Canal, which ran from Honesdale, Pa., to Kingston, N.Y., has been captured in a new film, produced by the State University College at New Paltz. It will have its public premiere Sunday, Dec. 14, at McKenna Theatre at the college. The film will be shown at 3, 4 and 5 p.m. Admission is free and tickets are not required.

When the War of 1812 cut off the supply of British soft coal which was used for fuel by the young industries on the east coast, brothers Maurice and William Wurtz, who owned land rich in anthracite coal, determined that the construction of a canal was the most viable means of transporting it from their Pennsylvania mines to the Hudson River and then to New York.

"Canaler" is a chronicle of that canal from the time of its inception until the last coal boat reached tidewater. It encompasses the engineering genius of its construction, its significance in the economic growth of the United States, and the day-to-day lives of the canaler and his family.

The film was produced by the Center for Instructional Resources (CIR) at the college with the collaboration of the history department. The late Manville Wakefield, historian of Sullivan County, was one of the major resources in writing and script.

John Price and Betty

Spencer of CIR wrote and produced the film. Leo Spies, New Paltz director of photography, shot the live scenes of what is left of the canal and transferred to film many still pictures which appear.

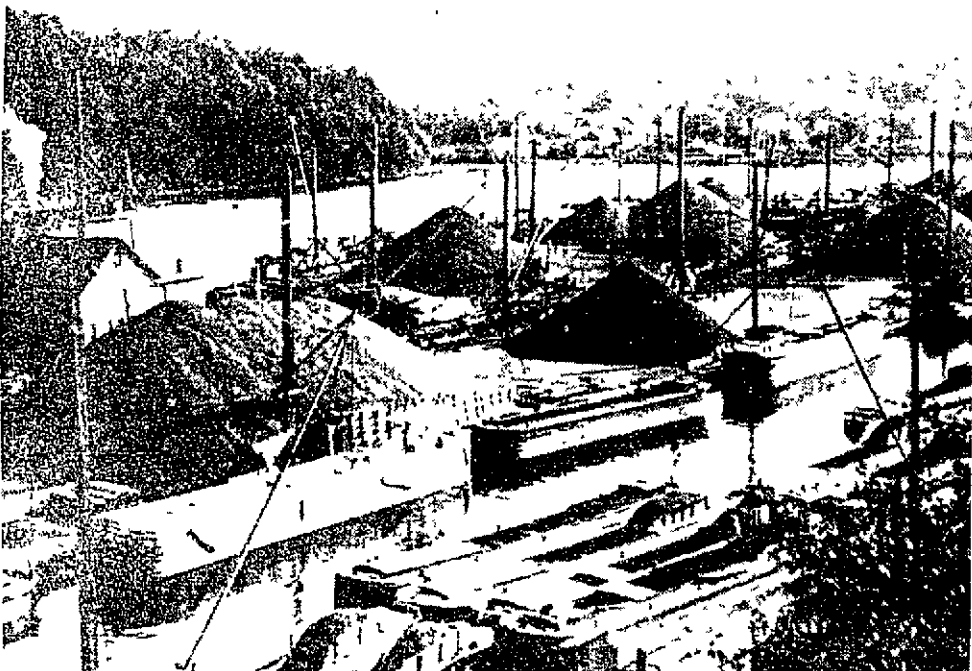

Pictures were found in private collections, museums, historical societies, in the archives of the D&H Railroad, and in a mural in a Honesdale motel. Much of the research was done by Alan Johnson, a New Paltz history student, who spent part of his senior year on an internship devoted to the project.

Dr. John M. Sherwig, New Paltz history chairman, said his department collaborated in the production because "we are interested in exploiting the study of local history and the canal was one of the most significant institutions in this region in the 19th century."

Bicentennial Flavor in '76

Pageant Moving to Kingston

KINGSTON The Miss Ulster County Scholarship Pageant will undoubtedly take on a bicentennial flavor in its 1976 presentation.

For in 1976 the pageant will be held in Kingston, the first capital of New York State.

After being held in Saugerties for several years and in Lake Katrine last year at the M. Clifford Miller Junior High School, the 1976 pageant site of Kingston will be another fitting tribute to the area's bicentennial celebration.

Announcement of the Kingston selection has been made known by George Leombruno, the Miss Ulster County Pageant executive director.

Leombruno said the 1976 pageant will be held at the J. Watson Bailey Junior High School auditorium. Miss Sharon Schneck of Palenville, the current Miss Ulster County, will crown the winner at the April 3, 1976, festivities at the Bailey School.

The pageant executive director also has announced that Sharon Daley will serve in

Ellen Palmer as well as two former county titleholders — Frances Tomshaw, Miss Ulster

County of 1973 and Debbie Buchan, the 1974 winner.

Ms. Daley noted that any unmarried young woman who resides, attends school or is employed in Ulster or Greene Counties, is eligible to enter the competition for the 1976 crown. Miss Ulster County of 1976 will compete for the crown of Miss New York State as well as additional scholarships.

The Miss America preliminary had been conducted as the Miss Ulster County Pageant in Saugerties since 1966. Prior to 1966, when Pamela Davis was crowned, the event was called the "Miss Saugerties Pageant" and was founded by the Saugerties Area Chamber of Commerce in 1956.

These contests were still staged in the Saugerties area until 1975 when the pageant was shifted to Lake Katrine.

The latest shift from Lake Katrine to Kingston will offer Kingstonians and Ulster County residents another great opportunity to view the talent of the various contestants as well as participate in another salute to the 200th birthday of our nation.

Past winners of both the Miss Saugerties and Miss Ulster County pageants have been:

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a 28-year-old woman I'll call "Terry." I am 31.

Terry and I have been going together for eight months. She claims to love me, but here's the problem: I want to marry her, but she says, "I don't want marriage."

Abby, can that be? Doesn't every woman want marriage? We started living together as an experiment. It has worked out very well for both of us, so why shouldn't marriage work out?

Terry says, "Marriage will OBLIGATE us to live together. This way, we stay together because we choose to."

Maybe I'm old-fashioned, but I want the security of knowing that we belong to each other legally.

Terry says a marriage certificate is just a piece of paper, which doesn't mean anything because if the marriage doesn't work out, it can be exchanged for another piece of paper that will dissolve it.

How can I get her to marry me?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD: You can't. And it's just as well, because while you may love each other, your ideologies are worlds apart.

DEAR ABBY: When our child started walking, we bought a harness for him. We use it to protect him in large crowds, unfamiliar surroundings and busy streets.

At first I felt hurt and even thought perhaps I was wrong when strangers would say, "What do you think he is — a dog?" Or, "That poor little thing. How can you do that to him?"

Now I am just plain angry!

Would those critics rather that our child be lost, be run over or fall down a flight of stairs? His harness has saved him from all these things.

Our child is now 2, and we will dispose of his harness soon, but until we do, I wish strangers would think twice before they make such unkind remarks.

INDIGNANT MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Perhaps if they thought twice, they wouldn't make any unkind remarks at all.

DEAR ABBY: I believe I read in your column that there is something a person can take to keep from crying at a wedding.

Please find out what it is and tell me. I am to be a mother of the bride, and I just know I am going to cry all over the place at my daughter's wedding, and I look terrible when I cry. My eyes get red and my nose runs and I sob and shake all over.

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Call your family doctor and ask him to prescribe something for your nerves. There are many such tranquilizers on the market.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you gave some excellent advice to a woman who was in love with a married man. I clipped it and kept it. It's still good and ought to be repeated at least once a year. Here it is:

FAITHFUL READER

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Traka of Asbury, Saugerties, were guests of honor at a 25th wedding anniversary party given by their daughter, Pat Hamilton, at the Flamingo Restaurant on Nov. 29. Several friends and relatives joined in the happy celebration for the Traka couple, married Nov. 25, 1950, in Yuma, Ariz. Mrs. Betty Budik, cousin of the couple, made the anniversary cake for the occasion.

Liberal Republicans Facing Disaster Year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the liberal wing of the Republican party, the 200th year of the republic threatens to be a political disaster.

Already a minority within a minority, there appears to be no role for them in the 1976 presidential campaign.

They are faced — as of now — with the prospect of having to go into battle against the Democrats following the banner of a conservative candidate.

To them, Gerald R. Ford or Ronald Reagan is a tasteless choice.

Grudgingly and without any great enthusiasm, they will support Ford but only because — above all — they want to stop Reagan.

It is Reagan's candidacy which already has sent distress pains shooting through the so-called East Coast liberal wing of the party.

Not only is there a distinct possibility that Reagan could upset Ford and win the nomination but his entry into the presidential primaries has forced Ford to shift to the right.

The liberals cannot field a candidate — even if they had a credible one — because to do so could only undercut Ford's strength and enhance Reagan's candidacy.

When Sen. Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland started rumblings about going into the primaries to offset Reagan and leave Ford as the centrist candidate, he was quickly put down by by fellow liberals in the Senate.

Now Mathias contents himself with thoughts of an independent candidacy should both major political parties nominate candidates with a "strong ideological cast."

Reagan, of course, would fit that description as would a number of Democrats.

But a Mathias candidacy — independent or third-party — besides admittedly being something of an impossibility next year would hardly cause a ripple among the electorate.

The frustration of the liberals was harshly voiced by Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois who had presidential visions of his own. He abandoned those when Ford decided to seek a full term in his own right.

As with all GOP liberals, the goal now is to stop Reagan. Percy said he would "vigorously oppose" the former California governor.

He said the GOP "simply cannot afford to nominate someone as far out of the centrist mainstream as Gov. Reagan. To nominate him in Kansas City next August would be as politically foolhardy as the Democrats' nomination of Sen. McGovern proved to be in 1972."

"Indeed, I believe a Reagan nomination, and the crushing defeat likely to follow, could signal the beginning of the end for our party as an effective force in American political life."

Percy also warned Ford "not to mitch the Reagan rhetoric or — worse yet — to act on it. If the President wins the nomination by out-Reaganing Reagan, it will cost him the election, and that will serve neither our party nor his own conservative philosophy."

With the election less than a year away, the Republican liberals are in the unhappy position of having no candidate of their own and being limited to support one conservative — Ford — to stop another — Reagan.

It is a grim prospect for the wing of his party which in the past won the nominations for the likes of Thomas E. Dewey of New York, stopped the GOP's "Mr Conservative" Robert Taft with Dwight D. Eisenhower, and could always rely on Nelson Rockefeller to provide an alternative.

No Excalibur Myth for Democrats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the legend of Arthur, the true king proves his worthiness by extracting the great sword Excalibur from solid rock. The wishful hope of Democrats for a reenactment of that myth in 1976 has been dashed.

In the past year, 10 Democrats have declared themselves candidates for the 1976 presidential nomination. At least three others may yet enter the race, depending on events between the beginning of delegate selection next month and the start of the Democratic national convention July 12 at Madison Square Garden.

This is an untidy and confusing situation for the party. Despite the adoption of detailed rules that are supposed to give everyone a fair chance to win the presidential nomination, there seems to be a strong emotional feeling within the party that the Democrats should already have a frontrunner, a "natural" candidate.

This is the kind of feeling that helped put Sen. Edmund Muskie out front for the 1972 nomination, and despite what happened to him, Democrats have been spending most of this fall seeking a way to cull their herd for a likely winner.

The party's liberal wing, blessed (or cursed) with more people who want to be President than other Democratic factions, was the first to begin the search for a champion. It sponsored five regional forums at which candidates were asked to present themselves to rank and file Democrats for inspection and testing.

Although several candidates seem to have improved their positions as a result of the forums, no single figure emerged as the candidate of the liberals.

Then the Democratic governors decided to try the same system. They called the candidates to their winter conference here last week to talk about issues of importance to the states and to answer questions. Nine of the 10 showed up and the result was the same: the sword remained in the rock.

The governors' forum was the only one at which both middle of the road Democratic candidates — Sens. Henry Jackson of Washington and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas — appeared. Although the governors are supposed to lean toward the right in party affairs, neither senator set the meeting on fire.

Ironically, the result may have been to blur the picture. Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, one of the most liberal governors, said what he got out of the forum was a feeling that both senators are capable and attractive men he would feel politically comfortable with.

And, even though his "New Populism" rhetoric seems far too rich for many of the more conservative governors, former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma got as friendly a reception and as warm a response from the conference as any of the candidates.

The forums did have one constructive result for the Democrats. First, they began the necessary process of getting people interested in the campaign to come. Second, they helped sharpen the issues and cross-fertilize the candidates' positions on national problems.

Examples of the latter were seen when Jackson came up with an idea for increasing federal educational expenditures that was very close to a proposal offered earlier in the year by former Gov. Terry Sanford; Sen. Birch Bayh expressed interest in the "zero base budgeting" espoused by former Gov. Jimmy Carter, and Rep. Morris Udall proposed a comprehensive new transportation trust fund that apparently grew out of Gov. Milton Shapp's plan for a railroad trust fund.

Expect Auto Sales To Improve in '76

DETROIT (UPI) — In the most optimistic prediction yet of the auto industry's recovery from the deepest slump since the Great Depression, General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy today predicted sales would top 10 1/4 million cars in 1976.

The 20 per cent improvement that Murphy is predicting over this year's recession level would put 1976 in the record books as the third best ever. The GM chairman predicted car and truck sales to gether would be in the area of 13 1/4 million units, also a 20 per cent gain.

In a year-end outlook, the chief executive of the world's largest auto company said two things clouding his outlook are the uncertainties caused by upcoming labor negotiations and the still unresolved conflict with Congress over clean air standards.

Murphy said he expected "sensible solutions" to both problems.

"We are confident that in the government and in the unions there is a high appreciation of the importance of the American automobile industry and a firm determination to maintain its recovery," he said.

The GM chairman renewed his challenge to the United Auto Workers not to seek too much in the way of more time off the job. He said the new contracts must achieve "a realistic balance between productivity and compensation" or the present recovery and the nation's ability to compete in world markets may be impaired.

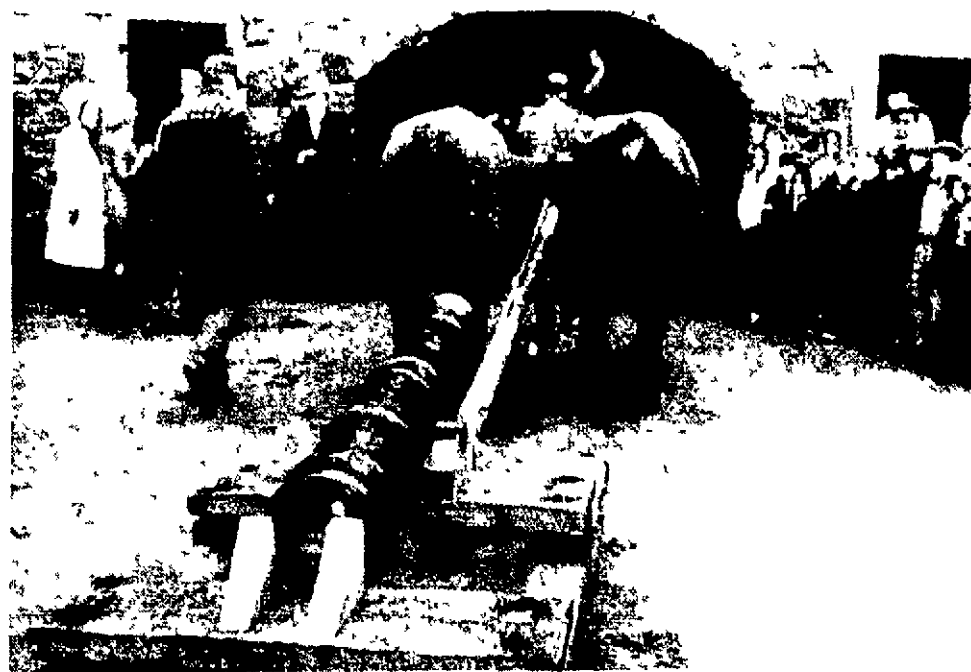

Murphy's optimism was in sharp contrast to the predictions of his main competitor, Henry Ford II of the Ford Motor Co., who says auto sales, including imports, won't get much above 9.5 million in 1976.

This year's estimated 8.6

million sales will be about 7 per cent below 1974 and nearly 25 per cent below the record 1973 level before the start of the Arab oil embargo that triggered the two-year slump. In the first two months of the model year, domestic auto sales scored gains of 23 and 35 per cent over year-ago levels.

Murphy said there was every reason to expect further recovery in 1976 because industrial production is up, employment has increased, consumer income is up and inflationary pressures are moderating.

But he said reducing unemployment will continue to present a major challenge for both government and industry in the year ahead. The four U.S. automakers still list 66,000 workers on indefinite layoff and have seen their blue collar labor force shrink from 732,000 in mid-1973 to 576,000 on the job in December.

Long Trip Begins

The reenactment of the Knox Trek began Wednesday amid a driving rainstorm from famous Ft. Ticonderoga. Behind an ox team the Knox Cannon, the same gun that made the journey 200 years ago, leaves the fort in Ticonderoga, N.Y., heading for Boston. Three sleds hope to retrace the steps of Henry Knox's "impossible journey" when he was in charge of the expedition that brought 60 tons of cannon and ammunition to George Washington at the siege of Boston. 'Protection' For Nessie

LONDON (UPI) — The Loch Ness monster — newly christened Nessiteras Rhomboptryx — may win protection as an endangered species even though many scientists don't believe there is such a beast.

A team of scientists that claims to have photographed the elusive prehistoric reptile presented their evidence to critics and supporters Wednesday at a seminar in the House of Commons.

The fuzzy underwater pictures — published in Nature, a leading scientific magazine — showed what appeared to be a creature with a horse-shaped head, a 6-foot flipper or fin and reddish, mottled skin.

David James, a member of the House of Commons and sponsor of the seminar, said other members of Parliament interested in conservation would probably support a plan to protect Scotland's most famous denizen as an endangered species.

Dr. Robert Rines, president of the Academy of Applied Science of Boston, and British naturalist Sir Peter Scott in his pictures are evidence the lake contains a breeding family of prehistoric reptiles 42 to 62 feet long with diamond-shaped flippers and a small head with "horn like protuberances". They suggested the large reptiles might have been landlocked about 12,000 years ago when an arm of the sea was sealed off into a lake as the ice age melted away.

Rines and Scott said the monster should be given a scientific name as the first step in arranging legal protection. They suggested Nessiteras (marvel of Loch Ness) rhomboptryx (with diamond-shaped flippers).

But some scientists at the seminar scoffed at Rines' pictures, taken by remotecontrol strobe-light cameras last summer.

Dr. Gordon Shields of the British Museum of Natural History said he thought the controversial fin belonged to a fish and estimates of its 6-foot length "are wildly out."

A group of five scientists from the British Museum is sued a statement that said, "None of the photographs is sufficiently informative to establish the existence, much less the identity of a large living animal in the Loch."

Dr. David Davies, Editor of Nature, was careful to point out that publication of the pictures did not mean his magazine supported Rines' theories. The magazine placed the three photographs and two drawings in its "Comment and Opinion" section where writers are free to express their own ideas.

'Holiday Embargo'

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A judge, admitting he might be technically wrong but morally right, will accept no more divorce cases until the day after Christmas.

the Christmas moratorium in 1974.

If even just one marriage had been saved it would have been justification for the moratorium. Naifeh said "But two were saved, and who knows, maybe we will up that score this year."

God meant for marriage to be sacred and this holy season will be a good time for couples with marital differences to sit down and talk things over rather than jump precipitously into what can become an often stormy affair.

'My Voice Must be Heard'

MOSCOW (UPI) — Shouting "my voice must be heard," Nobel Laureate Andrei D. Sakharov, tried and failed for the third time today to enter the courtroom where a fellow human rights activist is on trial.

The court declared defendant Sergei Kovalev in contempt and continued his slander trial without him after a bitter exchange over who should be allowed to enter the room at the courthouse in Vilnius, Lithuania.

Sakharov tried to enter the court after a recess but when vigilantes with red armbands stopped him, he shouted through the open door at the judge "My voice must be heard in there. I have a right to shout," one witness said. Communist party stalwarts who form the bulk of the spectators jeered at Sakharov, who was awarded the Nobel prize for peace in his absence in Oslo Wednesday.

"Go back to work one man shouted."

Kovalev facing up to 12 years in jail and exile on five counts of anti Soviet slander, said he would refuse to eat and take any further part in the trial until his friends were admitted.

A witness said the judge ejected Kovalev from the courtroom and continued the trial in his absence after he said "Since you have got along without a defense lawyer, you can get along without me, too."

The 45-year-old biologist, a member of the Amnesty International human rights organization is accused of producing illegal news journals, distributing copies of Alexander Solzhenitsyn's "Gulag Archipelago" and slandering the Soviet Union.

NAACP Official Here

KINGSTON Alfred Baker Lewis has been with the NAACP since 1920. He is 78 and appears frail, but his opinions as given recently to reporters in Kingston and to the Bard College Black Students Coalition are anything but frail.

Three topics Lewis chose to address were George Wallace's candidacy for president; an assessment of President Ford; and the need for national health insurance.

The retired insurance man has been on the NAACP board of directors for 17 years and still tours three months a year (at least) for that association. He is a white man, and bears the title "national treasurer emeritus."

•On Wallace — "When Wallace was first elected governor of Alabama it was the Ku Klux Klan support. He did not deny it, and the head of the Klan in Alabama boasted that they gave him his margin of victory." Lewis told of a book by William Huie called "Three Lives for Mississippi" that purports to document that Wallace packed the state parole board when elected to get two Klansmen — sentenced to 21 years in jail — out of prison.

They had been placed there, said Lewis, for castrating a Negro named Edward Arons whom they did not know, saying they just wanted to prove they "were good Klansmen by getting nigger blood on their hands."

Said Lewis, "His candidacy is a political abomination."

•On Ford — Lewis thinks he is "pretty dumb," because he proclaimed former President Nixon's innocence "when everyone else knew that Nixon was guilty"; because he was "then dumb enough to be surprised that there was a cry of outrage from the people and Congress" when Nixon was pardoned; because "he has vetoed every bill passed by Congress for social welfare purposes on the grounds that he does not want the federal budget to have a bigger deficit" when a deficit is "good, not bad, for then some of the unemployed get jobs to produce more goods and furnish more services to meet the increased purchasing power" of the federal government.

Lewis said a deficit will only cause inflation if there is full employment, and he blames current inflation on oil gouging by Arabs and Venezuela.

"President Ford hates the poor," he declared. "He even tried to increase the price of food stamps, although food stamps are necessary to provide a halfway decent diet for the poor." Another reason is "he vetoed a bill to provide more federal funds for education than he asked for, although education is necessary to enable people to get decent jobs . . ." Then he asked for $1.2 billion "for a nuclear powered cruiser above what he had originally asked for in the way of war materials."

•On socializing medicine — Lewis presented numerous favorable arguments, stating, "We need national health insurance because we do not now have good medical care." He said the best test of good medical care is infant mortality and, despite the fact we spend more on medical research than other countries, we are 17th from the lowest on infant mortality. "And every country with lower infant mortality than ours has some form of national health insurance."

Lewis pointed to the fact that we already have a form of government health insurance through workmen's compensation for industrial accidents, although it has no benefit to the person who cannot work.

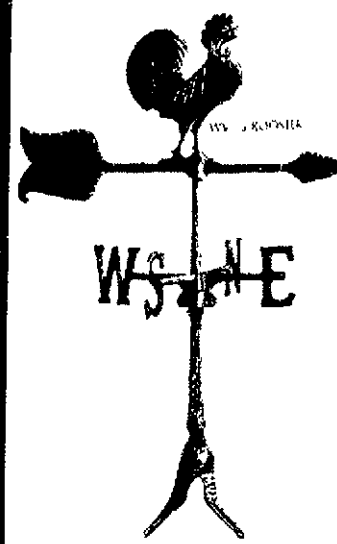

The cost is a specious argument, he said, because "someone in the community pays for ill health," be it a person's employer because of loss of work; his children for lack of money; taxpayers if the person is receiving public assistance; insurance policy holders in premiums. "National health insurance would actually reduce the cost of ill health," he said because too many people who cannot afford expensive doctors postpone a visit until their condition becomes serious. Lewis supports the Kennedy-Corman bill in Congress.

Owners Swallow Pride, Accept Veeck

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — "Look for me under the arc lights, boys," Bill Veeck said upon leaving baseball 14 years ago. "I'll be back."

Today Veeck is back—and at the same address as when he left as chief operating officer of the Chicago White Sox in 1961. But the return of the "Burrhead Barnum" was not without plenty of pitfalls.

Stung by a temporary rebuff a week ago from the American League owners in his bid to buy the White Sox and prevent the team from passing to Seattle interests, Veeck arrived at the winter baseball meetings early Wednesday morning confident he could meet the financial demands imposed upon him.

He did, but in the first vote by the AL owners Veeck fell one short of the nine affirmative votes necessary for approval. The vote was 8-4, three against and one abstention. But Veeck was not finished yet.

Detroit Tigers' owner John Fetzer, admittedly no great fan of Veeck's, recognized the petty prejudices involved in the negative vote and made an impassioned plea to his fellow owners to suck up their pride and take Veeck back.

"A lot of soul-searching has gone into this," Fetzer told the owners. "We have left these people (Veeck's group) over a barrel. We told them to go out and do it (get the necessary financing) and they did it."

"This is no time to be crying over spilled milk. We have to be men about this. I don't like the idea of letting a guy back in here who's called me a son of a bitch over and over again, but, gentlemen, we've got to take another vote."

And so they did, this time voting approval of Veeck by a 10-

2 margin—the only dissenters being Charlie Finley of the Oakland A's and Gene Autry of the California Angels.

SPORTS TODAY

"It's not often that a 61-year-old, one-legged man gets a new start in life."

Although Veeck's success eliminated the problem of the near bankrupt White Sox, it by no means ends the American League's woes. Still pending is a law suit from Seattle civic officials who were deserted by the AL in 1969 when the Pilots will move to Milwaukee.

"That's our next problem," said MacPhail. Reports already were circulating that the AL would try to fend off the Seattle suit by shifting either the Minnesota Twins or Finley's A's to that northwest city.

Meanwhile, National League owners were wrestling with the dilemma of the financially-strapped San Francisco Giants. The NL owners were expected to take over the club from owner Horace Stoneham today and operate it until new owners can be found.

"We can operate it indefinitely," said Los Angeles Dodgers' Board Chairman Walter O'Malley. He didn't mean the Dodgers could, but the National League.

Chisox Deal Kaat to Phils

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — Bill Veeck liked the water just fine, so he jumped right in.

Within the hour after the American League owners approved his purchase of the Chicago White Sox Wednesday night, the club made a five-player deal with the Philadelphia Phillies that included the unloading of veteran left-hander Jim Kaat, a 20-game winner the past two seasons. The White Sox gave up the 37-year-old Kaat and minor league shortstop Mike Buskey for three young Phillies—right-handed pitchers Dick Ruthven and Roy Thomas and infielder-outfielder Alan Bannister.

Earlier in the day, another former 20-game winner was involved in a trade as the Texas Rangers got right-hander Bill Singer from the California Angels for first baseman Jim Spencer and "a substantial sum of cash."

JIM KATT

"We wanted Kaat because we feel he can help us win the pennant next season," said Phils Manager Danny Ozark. "I'm not worried about any talk about his retiring. He's too good an athlete. After two straight 20-win seasons, he should be raring to go."

White Sox General Manager Roland Hemond said he was sorry to give up Kaat. "But we're on a youth movement and those young players we got will help us more over the long run."

DICK RUTHVEN

All three of the new White Sox were No. 1 draft choices when they were signed by Philadelphia. Ruthven, 24, had a 17-24 record in two and a half seasons with the Phillies and while Thomas, 22, has yet to make a major league appearance, he is rated a good prospect.

Bannister, 24, won the Phillies' starting centerfield job in spring training but was sent back to the minors in early May when the Phils got Garry Maddox from San Francisco.

Singer, 31, was a 20-game winner with Los Angeles in 1969 and with the Angels in 1973. But last season, plagued by back and elbow problems, he was only 7-15 with a 4.98 earned run average.

"We are gambling that Singer will be the comeback player of the year," said Rangers Manager Frank Lucchesi.

"We don't want to stiff Texas," said California General Manager Harry Dalton. "If it turns out he can't pitch next season, we'll have to work something out with the Rangers."

Spencer, a .266 hitter last year, was with the Angels from 1969 until they traded him to Texas in a five-player deal in May 1973.

"Spencer could be traded," said Dalton. "We've already had several offers for him. But he also could play first base for us next season. His addition gives us greater depth and also opens up an opportunity to put together a package for another trade."

Wednesday's trades brought to 21 the number of players dealt since the annual baseball meetings began here last weekend and 45 since the 1975 season ended.

Rangers Get Closer

The New York Rangers still haven't beaten a team with a winning record this season ... but they're coming a lot closer.

The Rangers fell just 6:59 short of upsetting the Buffalo Sabres Wednesday night, having to settle for a 2-2 tie when Gilbert Perreault blasted a 40-foot slap shot past John Davidson just after the 13-minute mark of the final period.

It was the second time the Rangers and Sabres have played to a tie in less than a week and the one point New York picked up in the standings kept the Rangers in last place of the NHL Patrick Division, two points back of idle Atlanta.

"I'm very deflated," said Davidson, who claimed Perreault's goal hit the inside of his skate before finding its way into the net.

"As long as you have good shots on goal you can't complain," said Ranger Coach Ron Stewart, whose charges peppered Buffalo netminder Gerry Desjardins with 33 shots. Buffalo, on the other hand, drilled 40 at Davidson.

New York jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first period on Walt Tkaczuk's fourth goal of the season but Jacques Richard tied it for Buffalo at 17:56 of the second period. Jerry Holland put New York up by one again with his fourth goal at 8:35 of the third period only to see Perreault tie it a final time with his 15th goal.

The Rangers have won just 11 times in 29 games this season and are the only team in the Patrick Division to give up more goals than they have scored this year.

In other games, Montreal tied Toronto 3-3, Detroit nipped Pittsburgh 3-2, Chicago blasted Washington 7-2, Philadelphia tied California 1-1 and Los Angeles blanked St. Louis 5-0.

In the World Hockey Association, Winnipeg tripped Toronto 6-5, New England dumped Minnesota 3-2, Edmonton clubbed Quebec 7-4 and Indianapolis topped Phoenix 2-1.

Canadiens 3, Maple Leafs 3
Guy Lapointe and Jacques Lemaire tallied third period goals to offset a pair of second period breakaway scores by Toronto's Lanny McDonald and keep Montreal unbeaten at home in 14 games. Toronto's Jim McKenny and Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer traded goals earlier in the contest.

Red Wings 3, Penguins 2

Black Hawks 7, Capitals 2
Dennis Hull scored two goals and set up two others in leading Chicago to a rout over Washington. The Black Hawks led 6-0 at one point but goaltender Tony Esposito lost his shutout bid when Bill Clement scored late in the second period and Jack Lynch added a goal early in the third.

Flyers 1, Golden Seals 1
A power play goal by Rick Hampton in the third period enabled California to tie the Stanley Cup champs in a game which featured outstanding goaltending by Gilles Meloche, who shut out Philadelphia for the final 58 minutes. The only Flyer goal was scored 66 seconds into the game by Bill Barber.

Kings 5, Blues 0
Marcel Dionne scored his second hat trick of the season and goalie Rogie Vachon recorded his third shutout in averaging a 6-0 loss earlier in the season to St. Louis. The sixth three goal game of Dionne's career gave him 20 for the season and tied him for the league lead with Pittsburgh's Jean Pronovost and Buffalo's Danny Gare.

WHA
Bobby Hull scored a goal just 44 seconds into the overtime period to give Winnipeg its victory over Toronto and keep the Jets undefeated in four overtime games this season ... Tom Webster's 12th goal at 9:25 of the third period pushed New England past Minnesota ... Norm Ullman scored his 500th career goal and Tim Sheehy added four more to direct Edmonton past Quebec ... and Blair McDonald scored a third period goal in his first game with Indianapolis to nudge the Racers past Phoenix

A HAPPY BILL VEECK

Fans Love It

CHICAGO (UPI) — "Dine-oh-mite!" exclaimed 22-year-old Gary Greenbaum.

"Fantastic," said John Wilson. "It's a great win for Chicago," said Mort Sullivan.

They had just been informed that the Chicago White Sox will stay right where they are—on Chicago's South Side—as a result of a vote by American League baseball owners at their winter meetings Wednesday night.

Across the city, fans reacted with glee to the decision to allow a syndicate headed by Bill Veeck to purchase the controlling interest in the club from John Allyn and keep the Sox in Chicago.

"That way we can have a subway series," said Greenbaum, a graduate student in business at the University of Chicago. "I'm not a Sox fan. I'm a Mets fan. But it makes a great deal of difference. Being in Chicago, I want to see more baseball games here. If there's two teams here, you can see more baseball games."

"The owners are also screwed up," he said of an initial vote to reject Veeck's ownership bid, "because the debentures that Veeck had were just as good as preferred stock. If the company liquidates, they're better. But that being unlikely, they're at least as good."

"Veeck's just the man for them," said Wilson, 31, a fifth grade school teacher. "I think Allyn was pretty boring and Veeck will probably do something more dramatic. That has already been more exciting than it's been for the last four years. It's certainly a controversial trade."

Mouthful of Puck

Carol Vadnais of the Rangers appears to have a puck in the mouth (it's just the camera angle) as the New Yorkers take on Buffalo Wednesday night in Madison Square Garden. Game ended in 2-2 tie. (UPI)

Will Parseghian Take Jets' Job?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ara Parseghian could be the New York Jets' head coach next season.

Parseghian, who left Notre Dame last year, has informed the Jets he will let them know either Monday or Tuesday if he is interested in entering negotiations with them for the job, according to the New York Daily News.

The News, in its Thursday editions, said Parseghian has confirmed the contact with the Jets and said he would "make my decision over the weekend."

"I would like to get it out of my mind by Monday or Tuesday," Parseghian said. "The key thing is whether I decide to re-enter the game."

He was unavailable for further contact Wednesday night and the Jets refused to comment on the story.

The Jets, now 3-9, fired Charley Winner last month. He was replaced strictly on an interim basis by offensive coordinator Ken Shipp, who lost his first three games before beating New England 30-28 Sunday.

Parseghian announced he was leaving Notre Dame Dec. 15, 1974, but remained on to coach the Irish to a 13-11 upset of Alabama in the Orange Bowl.

"When I resigned last December, I gave myself one full year to decide what I would do and I have programmed myself to that. I will review the whole thing over the weekend with my wife and I will decide whether I want to re-enter the game," the News quoted him as saying. "If I have an interest I will initiate the discussion (with the Jets)."

Parseghian also reportedly has also been offered the head coaching job of the New Orleans Saints, who also fired their head coach—John North—early this season. Personnel Director Ernie Heffeler is coaching the club, also on an interim basis.

Garrett Fined

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Running back Carl Garrett has been fined $350 and demoted to second string by New York Jets Coach Ken Shipp for missing one day's practice and reporting late for another session.

Steve Davis will start in Garrett's halfback slot against San Diego in Monday night's nationally televised game.

"I'm not cutting Garrett but I'm benching his butt," Shipp said. "That's the only way I've ever coached."

Garrett, acquired from Chicago early this season for Mike Adamle, was fined $250 for missing practice Monday and another $100 for showing up late and missing a meeting Wednesday. Tuesday is a day off for the Jets.

Garrett has a past history of missing practice sessions and it was one of the reasons the New England Patriots dealt him away after he earned Rookie of the Year honors for them in 1969. He once was suspended by the Patriots for missing practice but reinstated by Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

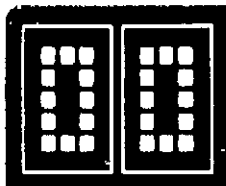

Garrett, who earlier this year had some of the same problems with Shipp's predecessor, Charley Winner, said only that he was unable to get from Boston to New York but would not elaborate.

Shipp also indicated he was not pleased with Garrett's blocking.

The Heavyweights

Heavyweight boxers Ron Lyle (L) and George Foreman (R) will meet in a 12-round nationally televised bout Jan. 24 in Las Vegas. With pair is former champ Joe Louis. Story on page 27. (UPI)

SPORT PARADE

Milton Richman,
UPI Sports Editor

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — Bill Veeck had a good day, a very good day. He got his old ballclub back. Billy Martin had a better one. He got his daughter back.

Unbeknownst to all but only a few at the winter baseball meetings here, Billy Martin has been going through unimaginable anguish these past few days because word reached him his 23-year-old daughter, Kelly Ann, had been arrested and jailed in Barranquilla, Colombia, for being found with cocaine in her possession.

She told police she had been "duped." She said she didn't know what was in those plastic packages given to her by a "friend," and she refused to reveal the name of the person who gave her the packages or the individual whom she was instructed to deliver them to in Miami.

Kelly Ann Martin is like her Papa in many ways, but unlike him in one. She's beautiful, a red-haired knockout. She's been living with her mother, Martin's first wife Lois, in California, but has always been close to her father, whom she visits periodically.

The other day, Martin got a call from his business partner, Bob Brown.

"You know your daughter is in jail in Colombia?" Brown said to him.

"You're kidding," replied the New York Yankees' manager. "What's she doing in Colombia?"

Martin thought his daughter was being held in Columbia, S.C., and when he discovered it was Colombia, South America, and she was being charged with drug possession, his first instinct was the same as any father's. He wanted to do anything he possibly could to help his daughter.

"I love her very much," confesses Martin, who also has an 11-year-old son, Billy Joe, by his present wife, Gretchen. "I started wracking my mind. Who do I know? Where can I get help? I didn't know what to do. I thought of calling Henry Kissinger and asking him what to do. Honestly. He's a Yankee fan and I felt he might help me."

Instead of Henry Kissinger, the first one Martin called was Bob Short, his old boss with the Texas Rangers who has helped a great many people in and out of baseball.

"He must have spent two whole days just making phone calls trying to help me out," says Martin. "I'll never forget what he did for me as long as I live. He told me not to get discouraged, he'd do all he could and he did."

Now it came time for Martin to go to the winter baseball meetings. He came here, but his mind was thousands of miles away in Barranquilla, Colombia.

Gabe Paul, the Yankees' president, and the father of a daughter Kelly Ann's age himself was completely understanding. Ordinarily managers take part in trade talks, but Paul told Martin not to worry about that. Instead, Martin spent two and three hours in his hotel room every day merely trying to make a call to Colombia.

"Did you ever try to get through to Barranquilla?" he asked.

That's where some of his friends here helped. Friends who speak Spanish like Camillo Pascual, who used to pitch for Minnesota; Preston Gomez, a former San Diego and Houston manager; and Tony Pacheco, one of the Astros' coaches who managed in Latin America.

"Camillo was going to fly down there strictly on his own just to try to help me out," says Martin. "Imagine that?" It was Pacheco who brought Martin the good news yesterday, though. He had gotten through to Barranquilla and talked to friends he had there. They knew where to get the right kind of legal help and assured Pacheco that Kelly Ann would be let out of jail within 72 hours.

Billy Martin was so happy he could've sung. It was as if some great weight had been pulled off his chest.

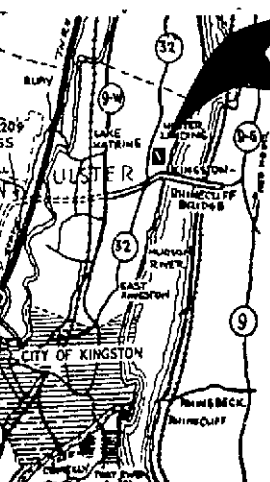

Bill Veeck had a good day but Billy Martin had a better one.

New Playoffs For Baseball?

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — The National League unanimously voted Wednesday to change its playoff system to four games out of seven instead of the present three out of five.

Bill Bartholomay of the Atlanta Braves initiated the proposal but for it to be accepted the American League would have to vote the same way Thursday. If a stalemate develops, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn is empowered to cast the deciding vote.

Memphis May Get NFL Team

MEMPHIS (UPI) — The National Football League expansion committee plans to meet next week to consider awarding a franchise to the Memphis Grizzlies of the old World Football League, the committee chairman has announced.

"The meeting will be a very serious discussion and a top-to-bottom analysis of Memphis," committee chairman Dan Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers, said by telephone from Pittsburgh Wednesday.

Rooney declined to speculate whether a final recommendation is likely at the meeting expected to be held in New York, though a definite date and meeting location had not been chosen Wednesday night.

"I am simply not in a position of saying if we will have a decision or not," he said.

Another member of the four-man committee, Lou Spadia of the San Francisco 49ers, was more specific about possible action on the application by Grizzlies owner John Bassett.

"The reason for the meeting is to make a determination,"

he said by telephone from San Francisco. "It is possible that we could come to a conclusion, but it is just as possible that we will need additional data."

Committee member Gerry Phipps of the Denver Broncos declined comment and Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys could not be reached.

If the committee favorably recommends Memphis for final consideration during the league owners meeting at Miami in January, affirmative votes from 20 of the 26 NFL owners will be required to admit the Grizzlies.

Bassett, a 36-year-old Canadian millionaire and one of the strongmen behind the defunct WFL, is spending $500,000 on his quest for an NFL franchise and has won the support of Memphis political, civic and business leaders.

He is seeking the support of the general public, with heavy television, radio and newspaper advertising, in a drive to sell 40,000 $10 season ticket pledges by Dec. 23.

As of Wednesday, 25,585 pledges had been sold. A three-hour local telethon promoting ticket pledge sales is scheduled Tuesday night from the Mid-South Coliseum.

The CBS television network has announced it will devote a segment of its Dec. 21 "NFL Today" program to an on-the-scene report of the "NFL-athon."

"It will be an objective piece," CBS sports vice president Robert Wussler said Tuesday, "but our attitude on this is to support Memphis as a civic endeavor."

The Price Will be High

Csonka Wants to Play

MIAMI (UPI) — Larry Csonka definitely wants to play football again next year but the team that gets him will have to pay—and that team may not be the Miami Dolphins.

Csonka, here this week to tape a television show, is under contract to play for the Memphis Southmen of the defunct World Football League. The team's owner, John Bassett, is keeping his roster intact in the hopes of being admitted into the NFL.

But if the 240-pound fullback becomes a free agent next year, the team that lands him will have to shell out big money for his services.

"Whatever I do, I'm going to play for a suitable contract," he said. "I'm not giving my services away. There are things that will have to be settled in my favor."

Joe Robbie, the managing general partner for the Dolphins, has indicated he is unwilling to pay Csonka an astronomical sum, but Csonka isn't quite sure if he wants to return to Miami.

"How do you come back once you've left," he said. "I like this town. It's natural for me to be here, but I don't want to come back and try to top myself. In that sense, it would be much easier to go someplace else, to start fresh.

"I think about the championship years, my times with Don Shula, what we had here. Those days are the kind you like to sit around a small beer joint in Ohio and talk about. But I think about Shula and I wonder what it would be like to be across the field from the best."

Even away from the team, Csonka remains a Dolphin fan.

"I'll be cheering for the team the rest of the way," he said. "I couldn't watch the game Sunday and I was killing myself trying to get it on the radio. I had to settle for the highlight film."

Csonka admits he's thought about retirement but said there is no question he wants to play somewhere next year.

"Above the money, the crowd, the glory, I love to play the game. I've thought about retirement but here I am out of football and having to try very hard to stay busy. Hell, I miss football."

Dwight White is Ailing But He Should be Ready

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Defensive end Dwight White of the Pittsburgh Steelers was sent home early Wednesday when a sinus condition flared up, but a club spokesman said he would be ready for Saturday's nationally televised game with the Cincinnati Bengals.

Another member of Pittsburgh's famed defensive unit, Joe Greene, showed no apparent effects from a recent injury in Wednesday's workout. Greene has been sidelined with a groin injury he suffered in the first meeting with the Bengals. He did not play in last Sunday's game against Cleveland.

Coach Chuck Noll is not expected to decide whether to start Greene against the Bengals until just before game time. He would be replaced by Steve Furness.

If the Steelers defeat the Bengals, it would wrap up their second consecutive Central Division title in the American Football Conference. A Cincinnati win would enable the Bengals to tie the Steelers for the lead.

Pittsburgh defeated the Bengals 30-24 in Cincinnati and the Steelers are favored to repeat Saturday

A homework assignment for anyone taking the Utica Club Bar Exam.

As with any exam, you should be well schooled before you take ours. But we'd hate to see you do any last minute cramming.

So we suggest that you go into practice well before you take the Utica Club Bar Exam.

In the privacy of your own home, take any two beers of your choice and one of our choice, Utica Club. Pour them into mugs and mix the mugs up. Or, if you want to make it a full dress rehearsal, have someone blindfold you. Just to make sure you taste the beers, not the labels.

We think you'll choose the beer of our choice over the others.

And the water that goes into a

Utica Club is so good it could be bottled and sold by itself.

Besides, every day Utica Club makes the grade with the toughest testers we know. Us.

Which is why we think it can make the grade with you.

If it doesn't... continue practice. If it does, you've done all the studying necessary.

Struggling Hawks Suffer One-Sided Swim Defeat

ONEONTA New Paltz State swimming coach Art Stockin said after Wednesday's defeat to Oneonta State, "I don't ever remember a score like it."

The struggling Hawks went down by an overwhelming 96-13 count and will sit on a 0-2 record now until the rest of the schedule resumes January 17 with a home meet against Stony Brook.

"Oneonta is a traditionally strong team, and right now we're having trouble being representative," Stockin said. "Our boys just lack a back-

The Hawks couldn't pick up anything better than Scott Smith's second place in the 1000 freestyle against Oneonta. That and ten third places was the sum total of the New Paltz scoring. Oneonta swept the 11 individual first places and both relays.

The highlight of the meet was double winner Jack Walsh's 290.8 score in the optional diving. It was a new pool record.

The summaries:

Season Opens Friday KHS Wrestlers Look Strong

KINGSTON "I think the league is finally catching up to Arlington. Everybody will be tough. And we should do well also."

"That's the succinct prediction of Kingston High School wrestling coach Dean Short as he prepares to send his team out for its 1975-76 debut Friday night at Kate Walton Field House against non-league foe New Paltz.

The JV match begins at 6:30 p.m. with the varsity contest to follow. Admission is free.

Kingston, which finished last season with a 10-5 record and a third place effort in the Dutchess County Scholastic League tournament, lost the outstanding Rich Sippl (167) and the powerful Paul Martino (177). But a strong nucleus returns, making thoughts of a league championship within reason.

The DCSL meet, incidentally, will be hosted by Kingston on February 20 and 21.

The case of Bradley is interesting because last year he was one of Short's top wrestlers, but this year has gone up in weight class and hasn't been able to crack the starting lineup.

Question marks for Kingston are the upper weights because of the new wrestlers now performing there. KHS looks solid from 91 to 155.

Currently the Tigers are focusing their attentions on New Paltz, a team which tied for the UCAL title last year and which beat Kingston 33-22 in a non-league match.

RH, NP Matmen Win Opening Matches

KINGSTON Two teams expected to make bids for the Ulster County Athletic League wrestling championship got off to impressive starts Wednesday. Red Hook High, winner of last year's UCAL tournament, posted a 62-0 shutout of Fallsburgh, and New Paltz handed Walkkill just as easily, 60-0.

Jeff Heath Dead at 59

India Gains In Davis Cup

TOKYO (UPI) — India defeated Japan 3-2 today in the second round of the best-of-five Davis cup Eastern Zone elimination at the Denen Coliseum outdoor clay tennis courts. India will face the Philippines in the third round.

Vijay Amritraj, India's No. 1 player, won over Toshiro Sakai, 1973 Asian singles champion, 3-6, 6-0, 6-4, 6-3, in the first of the two final-day singles to give India an unbeatable 3-1 lead. It was Japan's 12th consecutive loss to India in Davis Cup elimination rounds.

Second World Cup Triumph For Lise Marie Morerod

APRICA, Italy (UPI) — Switzerland's Lise Marie Morerod flew down an Alpine slalom track almost three seconds ahead of her closest challenger Thursday to record her second victory of the new World Cup ski season.

Austria's Monika Kaserer and Hanny Wenzel of Liechtenstein failed to make the first 10 of the first heat. After two downhill and a giant slalom, the Austrians led the standings with four of the top 11 places (11 rather than 10 because of ties). Switzerland held three and West Germany and the United States two each.

Lineman of the Year Selmon Named

NEW YORK (UPI) — Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma, a brainy and brawny tackle who was the mainstay of one of the nation's most respected defensive units, today was named Lineman of the Year by the United Press International in a balloting of sports writers and sportscasters from across the nation.

Selmon, a 6-foot-2, 256-pound senior from Eufaula, Okla., won by a narrow margin over senior defensive tackle Steve Niehaus of Notre Dame. In a poll of 100 sports writers and sportscasters, Selmon received 29 votes to edge Niehaus by just four votes.

Center Rik Bonness of Nebraska and defensive end Leroy Cook of Alabama tied for third with 11 votes apiece while linebacker Ed Simonini of Texas A&M received six votes.

Selmon, a scholar-athlete who carries a 3.36 average in special education, was credited with 132 tackles this season, 88 of them unassisted. He had 10 tackles that resulted in 48 yards in losses, recovered four fumbles and blocked a kick.

"It's easy to say he's the best we've ever had here," said Larry Lacewell, an Oklahoma assistant coach who is in charge of the defense. "I can't really believe there's been a better one anywhere. He's the best I've ever seen in my coaching career at his position."

Lindy Cochran, 22, of Richmond, Vt., turned in the best U.S. showing, taking sixth place. A second U.S. skier Abby Fisher, 18, of South Conway, N.H., was right behind her in seventh place.

Morerod won the giant slalom at Val D'Isere last week, making her a favorite for the February Innsbruck Olympics.

She said this run made her "much more nervous" and she did not want to know the other competitors' times after the first heat.

Christa Zechmeister of West Germany was eliminated when she missed the first gate. Another strong contender, Betsy Clifford of Canada, fell near the bottom of the course.

Las Vegas Trip Comes Up 'Snake Eyes'

Nowhere to Go

Circuit Court to Hear Knight's 'Traveling Suit'

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Lawrence Circuit Court Judge H. Wayne Baker will hear arguments Friday morning in the suit by Indiana basketball coach Bobby Knight against the NCAA's rule on traveling squads.

Monroe Superior Court Judge Randy Bridges, who is also president of the IU Varsity Club, granted the NCAA a change of venue on the case Wednesday afternoon, saying he wanted the two sides to agree to a move to a neighboring county.

The hearing was set late Wednesday after defense attorney Steve Goldsmith and Knight's attorney Steve Ferguson agreed to move the case to Lawrence County.

The suit, which challenges the NCAA rule limiting the size of traveling squads as being arbitrary and capricious, seeks a preliminary injunction against enforcement of the rule.

Knight said he was anxious to get a quick ruling because his team plays Kentucky at Louisville Monday night.

The suit had been transferred from state to federal court but was returned to the state system by a federal judge who said all state remedies had not been exhausted.

By UPI
A trip to Las Vegas came up "snake eyes" for ninth-ranked Arizona.

Arizona, the favorite to win the Western Athletic Conference this season, lost its second game this week Wednesday night when 11th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas scored a 98-94 victory by holding the Wildcats' top scorer, Bob Elliott, to only three points.

The Rebels built an 18-8 lead in the first five minutes but Arizona drew even and both teams scored in spurts throughout the game. Las Vegas led 47-42 at the half and 94-85 with three minutes left to play.

Eddie Owens scored 25 points to spark the Rebels victory. Len Gordy led Arizona with 22 points but Elliott, who entered the game with a 20-point average, was held scoreless from the field and managed just three free throws.

Las Vegas is now 5-0 while Arizona, which lost to 20th-ranked Kansas State Monday night, dropped to 4-2.

In other games involving the top 20 ranked teams, No. 2 Maryland routed Georgia Tech 93-65, No. 16 Kentucky beat Miami (Ohio) 91-69, No. 19 Michigan topped South Carolina 91-82 and No. 20 Kansas State whipped Northern Illinois 86-59.

Maryland, boosting its record to 6-0, got 17 points apiece from Steve Sheppard and Larry Gibson in its rout of Georgia Tech. The Terrapins led by only 17-16 after 10 minutes but built a 43-33 halftime lead then outscored Tech 14-6 at the start of the second half to break the game open. Maryland's point total was its lowest of the season.

Kentucky, which lost its first two games to Northwestern and North Carolina, finally got into the victory column by crushing Miami behind a combined 61-point effort by Jack Givens and Rick Robey. Givens scored 31 points and Robey added 30.

Rickey Green scored 11 points in the first six minutes to give Michigan an early lead and the Wolverines then held off three South Carolina challenges en route to their second triumph in three games. Green scored 27 points and had key steals in the second half when the Gamecocks mounted their final comeback attempt. Alex English scored 30 points for South Carolina, which lost its first game after three victories.

Darryl Winston led a balanced attack with 18 points in sparking Kansas State's rout of Northern Illinois. Mike Evans had 15 points, Chuckie Williams hit 14 and Carl Gerlach added 10 for the Wildcats, who raised their record to 4-2.

Elsewhere, San Diego State scored 15 straight points in the final three minutes to nip Purdue 81-79. Arnold Dugger sunk a free throw with 45 seconds left to give Oral Roberts a 70-69 victory over Tulsa. Ron Davis scored 29 points to lead Washington State to an 83-68 victory over San Francisco State and Stu Jackson poured in 20 points to help Oregon down Montana State 89-62.

Irish Test Hoosiers

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Indiana's top-ranked Hoosiers and Coach Bobby Knight aren't taking eight-rated Notre Dame lightly as the Irish come to town tonight for college basketball showdown.

Indiana has only lost twice since the Hoosiers moved into Assembly Hall four years ago, and one of the defeats was inflicted two years ago by Notre Dame.

"Notre Dame is a good blend of experienced and young players," Knight said. "They play well together in a number of different combinations. They play smart basketball."

Knight planned to stay with the same lineup that overwhelmed UCLA in the season opener and Florida State Monday night—6-foot-11 Kent Benson at center, 6-7 All America Scott May and Tom Abernethy at forward and floor general Quinn Buckner and Bobby Wilkerson at guard.

The Irish will be led by junior Adrian Dantley, an All-America who was the nation's No. 2 scorer last year. Notre Dame, now 4-0, beat Kansas Monday night 72-64 in the first road game of the season for the Irish.

Irish Coach Digger Phelps expects a tough game.

"It's another tough game on a schedule that includes Kansas and UCLA on the road," he said. "Indiana is No. 1, of course, and they're awesome. It will do us good to play against that type of opposition."

"We're kind of young. We've got to mature and you mature quick against a team like Indiana."

Knight, who preaches defense, said Indiana has worked hard on that aspect of the game.

KHS Girls Basketball Prospects Good

KINGSTON High scoring Ertha Burris, a junior, heads the list of returnees for the Kingston High School girls varsity basketball squad in the Dutchess County Scholastic League. The team opens at John Jay on Jan. 7.

Other letter players returning are seniors Diana Baker, Julia Holland, Julie Jackson, Karin Krajick, Sandy Mancuso and Jill Wells. The other junior returnee is Julie Chavis. Outstanding newcomers include juniors Lori Eaton, Maida Lewis and Debbie Hopper and senior Pearl Gay and sophomore Lynette Byrd.

The Jayvee roster lists Annette Davis, Diana Eaton, Jeanette Gatton, Teresa Howard, Pixie Lyons, Sonia Mapes, Cindy Montague,

Teresa Thomas, Linda Van Wagner and Chanise Evans. Coach Pat Burke's varsity will play 16 games, with non-league contests scheduled against Coleman and Oteora. "We hope to make a strong run at the DCSL championship this time around," said varsity coach Pat Burke. "We have a better balanced scoring attack and seem to be much sharper on defense than last year," the Kingston coach rates Lourdes, John Jay, Rosevelt and Beacon as the chief threats to the locals.

Merry Kaune will coach the Jayvees.

BOY'S 4-20

The Familiar Ms. King

Billie Jean King made these strange faces after a few bad moves in her match against Virginia Wade in a Virginia Slims tournament earlier this year. The problem is, says Ms. Wade, Billie Jean's face is one of the few most fans recognize. (UPI)

Women's Tennis Needs Better Public Relations

CHICAGO (UPI) — Women's tennis needs to spread its publicity beyond the top four or five stars to improve its fan attraction, British star Virginia Wade believes.

"There should be more attention on the players who may not be in the top four or five," she said. "People get the idea that if they're not watching Billie Jean King, or Margaret Court, or Evonne Goolagong or Chris Evert that the game isn't worth watching."

"It's not the fault of anyone, really. The promoters tend to tell the public who the stars are that are going to play, and the public comes out to watch them. But there are a lot of other players who play good tennis."

Miss Wade, on tour to publicize the coming Virginia Slims series, said the Slims tournaments were "fantastic" additions to women's tennis because "there used to be sponsors who'd be there one year and gone the next. Nothing was sure."

"With these tournaments you know they're going to go on. They're consistent and give us a full winter of competition. It's incredible how much tennis you can play."

She credited the Slims circuit with bringing into tennis more players who could challenge for top ratings.

"Our big struggle now is to get tennis accepted for women in Europe," she said. Outside of England and Australia, there isn't much women's tennis in the rest of the world."

Miss Wade, who finished third in earnings on the Slims tour last year with $78,063, was the only player to win consecutive championships, at Dallas and Philadelphia, and she had the longest winning streak of any player on the tour, 13 matches.

During this stretch she defeated Olga Morozova, Martina Navratilova, Evonne Goolagong, Billie Jean King and Chris Evert, all rated among the superstars of the game.

She did not credit super play for the winning streak.

"I've got a good record against the best players," she said. "I've beaten Billie Jean more than she's beaten me. I'm about equal with Evonne, and Martina, she's a hell of a player. She's ahead of me."

This year, she said, could be different. At the age of 30, "I'm fitter, and better," she said. "I could win a lot this year."

Chuck Foreman Nears 'Triple Crown'

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — No National Football Conference player has ever won the rushing, receiving and scoring titles all in one season, but Minnesota running back Chuck Foreman is likely to accomplish that triple this year.

Foreman has rushed for 961 yards on 247 carries, caught 62 passes for 600 yards and scored 18 touchdowns to top the NFC in each category.

The shifty third-year back is only 11 yards short of breaking the Vikings' single-season rushing record of 972 set by Dave Osborn in 1967 and needs only 39 yards to become Minnesota's first 1,000-yard rusher.

Foreman was injured in the third quarter of the Vikings' 24-3 victory over Green Bay Sunday and sat out the rest of the game after rushing for 64 yards and catching six Fran Tarkenton passes for 81 yards and one touchdown.

"I wish I could have gotten the 1,000 yards at home, but now I'll have to settle for that mark in Detroit next Sunday," said the 6-foot-2, 210-pound back.

"I really took a beating in the Green Bay game. I slipped and a Packer fell on my ribs. I came back in the game and the same thing happened, but the second time I got the wind knocked out of me. I wanted to go back in and could have played. I could have gotten the 1,000 yards if I had stayed in the game."

Foreman already has broken two Minnesota season records. His 18 touchdowns surpassed Bill Brown's old mark of 16 in 1964, and the 62 receptions eclipsed his own record of 53 set last year.

Tarkenton calls Foreman "the best back in all of pro football."

"You can do more with Chuck than with any other

A wide receiver his junior and senior years at Miami (Fla.) University, Foreman believes he still is improving as a runner.

"I hadn't done any running out of the backfield since my sophomore year in college when I joined the Vikings," he said, "but I feel now that I'm equal to the players who were running backs in college and are in the NFL now."

"You have to give Ed Marinaro (running back) and our line credit for a lot of my yards. They can really open up some big holes. I've scored quite a few times on a play we use a lot—just hurdle over the line and follow Marinaro and tackle Chuck Goodrum."

Minnesota Coach Bud Grant said, "Chuck isn't the fastest back in the league, but nobody has more moves than he does. His versatility gives us plenty of offensive weapons."

Early returns in the State University New York Athletic Conference (SUNYAC) indicate that the battle for the championship will be fought between Oneonta and Albany State. The teams are scheduled to meet here Jan. 24.

Oneonta State served notice in the first week of the season that it is the team to beat. Coach Don Flewelling's Red Dragons began with an expected win over Cortland, then defeated defending champion Brockport, 94-53, in what was expected to be an early-season showdown.

Both games were played at Oneonta, where the Dragons crushed New Paltz State Tuesday.

Albany, rated a pre-season contender along with Oneonta and Brockport, also got off well, crushing Cortland on the road, 75-45, and then downed Binghamton 81-71. Geneseo beat visiting Oswego, 74-62.

The MH-Conference: Ulster and Westchester

MIDDLETOWN - Two weeks into the Mid-Hudson Conference Basketball League schedule and one thing becomes painfully obvious: Ulster and Westchester, the only unbeaten teams left, will probably lose only to each other in the conference race.

Ulster has racked up three impressive victories, but must rally from an 8-point deficit with 13:43 left to play in that "short-circuited" game with Westchester.

Ulster figures to romp against winless Orange Friday night. Dutchess and Rockland were scheduled to meet to-night (Thursday).

Early statistical leaders are

Tony Michella of Rockland in scoring with a 28.5 average and Bob McLaren of Dutchess with 26.5 average. Larry Rhodes of Westchester, has a perfect 1,000 average from the free throw line. Rhodes is also the top rebounder with a 17.0 average per game.

Top assist man in the league is Ulster's Rachid Walker with a 9.5 game average. Walker also fifth in scoring with 18.0. Ray Younger is fourth in free throws (.833) and Ray Younger fourth with 833.

KINGSTON - Steve Peruso (34) and Ted Wood (27) combined for 61 points to pace Edgar's to a 84-80 edge over Al's Deli in the A Division of the YMCA Basketball League. Wood also hauled in 16 rebounds.

Glenn Elliot turned in another strong performance for Al's with 32 points and 17 rebounds. Rick Peruso added 15 points.

In an inter-division contest, Joyous Lake of the A Division trounced Giustino's Market of the B Division, 88-67 on the strength of a 50-32 second half advantage.

LPGA Set

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Nine of the LPGA's best, headed by little Sandra Palmer, will compete Saturday and Sunday in the $50,000 Colgate Triple Crown Invitational at the Mission Hills Country Club.

The nine women pro golfers were the top point winners in three Colgate-sponsored tournaments in the United States, Europe and Australia this year.

In addition to Miss Palmer, who won the Dinah Shore tournament here last April, the field will be made up of Pat Bradley, Chako Higuchi, Carol Mann, Joyce Kazmieraki, Jane Blalock, JoAnn Washam, Judy Rankin and JoAnne Carner.

Foreman Believes Bicentennial Will be His Year

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — George Foreman hasn't fought a major bout since he lost the heavyweight championship to Muhammad Ali in Zaire, Africa, in October, 1974. Since then he has weathered a state of near depression, fought some exhibition fights that have been roundly criticized and put together a new "fighting family."

What Foreman is trying to say is that he's back in town, wants another shot at Ali and wants to do it in America's Bicentennial year.

"I think that 1976 is going to be the year of George Foreman," the 27-year-old babyfaced former champion said Wednesday. "I think with the Bicentennial coming up, it's going to mean a lot to me. I feel I have a lot to do with the image of the United States and the image of young people, and if I can lose the title one year and win in back in 1976—it will inspire George Foreman to a lot of other things."

Foreman's confident pitch sounds almost like a direct reference to his days as an amateur boxer on the U.S. Olympic team at the 1968 Games at Mexico City. During those turbulent days of racial strife in America, a couple of black track athletes refused to honor the American flag when they were awarded medals at the Games, and instead hoisted black power salutes.

Foreman reacted bitterly and when his turn came to win the gold medal for boxing, he raised a small American flag in a personal show of patriotism.

Foreman's attempted comeback as a pro comes Jan. 24 at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev., when he will meet No. 5 ranked heavyweight Ron Lyle in a 12-round bout on national television.

Both fighters have been victims of Ali and both regard victory as a must in their hopes for a rematch.

Foreman's new boxing family includes former pro football star and actor Jim Brown as his advisor. Brown said he witnessed Foreman's eighth-round knockout at the hands of Ali in person.

"I offered him a few suggestions," said Brown. "I told him later on I would work with him and put a program together that would help him win the heavyweight championship back."

Others in Foreman's new camp include manager Gil Clancy and trainer Kid Rapidez, who also trains welterweight Jose Napoles.

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for my new team," said Foreman. "I think Kid Rapidez and Gil Clancy are the most important ingredients in the picture."

Foreman, boasting a record of 40 wins with 37 KOs and one loss, reigned as world champion for nearly two years before his loss to Ali.

"Africa is in the past. I was champion before. I believe I can become champion again. Ali is a tremendous athlete and a tremendous fighter."

"I feel I lost the fight and the only way I'll become champion again is by getting into the ring and beating the world champion at the time. History will look at my loss (Zaire fight) as a whole and look at it fair and square. So why should I be different than history?"

Lyle, 34, of Denver, was defeated by Ali last May 16 in an 11th round TKO in Las Vegas. Lyle indicated this would be the biggest fight of his career.

"I consider myself as the best contender in the top 10 because I've fought some good fighters and stood up against some good fighters," he said.

"I don't see George Foreman as being indestructible or invincible. He's human. He knows what it's like to be a victim of a knockout."

Lyle, who has a record of 32 wins with 22 knockouts and two losses, to Ali and Jerry Quarry, said his plan against Foreman would be "to win. I don't think there's any such thing as a game plan in boxing. When you get right down to the nitty-gritty, it is an act of survival."

"When the curtain falls, everyone knows their parts and lines and knows how to adjust. George has to worry about me—I don't have to worry about him."

49er's Trainer All Wrapped Up in His Work

By Murray Olderman
REDWOOD CITY, CALIF. — (NEA) — When Chuck Krpata finishes wrapping and taping the brawny bodies of the San Francisco 49ers, the amount of elastic and adhesive used would stretch all the way from their home city to rugged Big Sur on the California coast—a distance of 125 miles.

Just for one game, Chuck will use a full mile of 1.5-inch tape—5,280 feet, 1,760 yards. But that's only a small part of what it takes to minister to half a hundred athletes in the flower of their youth and strength.

The training room of a football team is a mechanical maze marked off by endless spools of tape.

That's because sometimes he sees them even more. But that relationship, thanks to modern technology, isn't just a soothing squeeze of the muscles, a friendly swat on the butt and a word of encouragement. Chuck can push buttons to reach deep aches and measure muscular responses. And he can embellish his personal psychology with the knowledge gained from intense schooling which included a masters degree in physical therapy (the University of Southern California).

None of it (including the shooting) comes cheap. In one training room, the 49ers have rigged up a couple of chairlike contraptions wired to machines. They were not transposed from Sing Sing. They are a cybex (Price tag: $6,500) and two orthitrons ($1,200) each, and their function is to measure by electronic print-outs on the cybex which resemble an EKG, muscular strengths and defects revealed by isokinetic exercises with the orthitrons.

"How far along is he?" Coach Dick Nolan will ask Krpata (his name sounds like one of his machines). And Chuck will tell him the defensive back with the hamstring pull is 80 per cent back to normal.

"The cybex has taken the guesswork out of it," says Chuck.

Tests revealed that Norm Snead, the veteran quarterback who came to the club last year, had a strength deficit in his right knee. They gave him an orthitron to take home for the winter for exercises, and now Snead says his hinge has never been stronger. So does the cybex.

Also among Chuck's paraphernalia are a combination ultra sound and electric stimulation machine ($759) to apply, deep heat to contusions, sprains and strains; a hydrocollator tank for hot towels; three whirlpool baths for strategic immersion; an iontophoresis machine which induces medication through the skin instead of having to inject the patient—trainers are not allowed to inject, and docoets aren't always around; and an ice machine—"one of the most valuable of all," notes Chuck, since it produces 600 pounds of ice every 24 hours, and the 49ers use it all, plus 200 pounds daily which they buy in town.

In one corner stands a mysterious looking, aluminum-plated chest. It is Chuck's specially designed travel kit to take with him to all games, a virtual mobile infirmary. In it are such diverse items as telfa pads, prewrap gauze, adhesive tape (half-inch, 1-inch, 1.5-inch), elastic tape (1-2-3-inch), tape cutters, tape adherent, plastic bags, tape remover, plastic casting material, three different sizes of Band Aids, elastic expandable Band Aids, vaseline, foot powders, elastic bandages for wrapping injuries, cast cutters and hypo allergenic tape.

An auxiliary trunk also contains knee braces, cervical collars, wrist spints, shoulder immobilizers, arm slings, two pairs of crutches, metal cutters (for face masks) and an emergency stretcher.

Chuck doesn't want to be caught short in any emergency. But all the devices and all the gadgetry bow inevitably to the human factor in a crisis. A few weeks ago a rookie full-back, Wayne Bullock of Notre Dame, crumpled in a scrimmage on a nearby practice field.

Chuck, thirtyish and fit enough to be a player himself, rushed out and immediately determined the player had fractured the tibia of his right leg. He cut off the shoe and sock and, by examination and palpitations, figured out the fibia was also fractured. In one minute, he had an air splint on the limb. In four minutes, a rescue crew from a nearby hospital had arrived. In 20 minutes, Bullock was in the operation room.

There's hope he'll come back to play next season. By which time, Chuck will have paid the tape bill for this season. It comes to $12,000.

Double up, America.

Two can ride cheaper than one.

New USGA Program

FAR HILLS, N.J. — Individual golfers would have closer ties with the national ruling body of the game — the United States Golf Association — under a new concept in affiliation which the USGA will introduce next week.

The program, to be known as the USGA Associates Program, will be inaugurated at a luncheon at the Hotel Washington, Washington, D. C. on Thursday, Dec. 18. It will be introduced by the Executive Committee of the USGA and Arnold Palmer, National Chairman of the Associates Program.

Palmer will designate President Gerald R. Ford the first USGA Associate.

Under the Associates Program an individual may help support the work of the USGA. Previously, only clubs provided financial support through payment of membership dues. Other USGA income has come primarily from championships.

Clubs will continue to comprise the USGA's membership, but the Associates Program will provide an individual with the opportunity to have a direct affiliation with the USGA. It gives the association a broader contact with individual golfers and provides better communication between the USGA and all golfers.

The Associates Program is the result of a study lasting more than a year. For some time, the USGA has been searching for a method of reaching millions of golfers on an individual basis so that they could become more closely identified with the organization. After extensive research, the Executive Committee, under the leadership of Harton S. Semple of Sewickley, Pa., the USGA president, developed this concept.

The Association also considers it essential to broaden its sources of revenue. Currently, much of its income is generated by the U.S. Open Championship.

USGA Associate status is available in three categories: single, $12 annual fee, husband and wife, $16; Junior, $8.

As an expression of appreciation for his support each USGA Associate will receive from the USGA:

A copy of the Rules of Golf Booklet. A year's subscription to Golf Journal, the official publication of the USGA.

A golf bag tag bearing the USGA seal, the Associate's name, and the year

SUBJECT: Sunday Opening

TO: Our Customers

FROM: Yallum's

Quite frankly, our phone has been ringing an inordinate amount of times questioning whether we will be opening on Sunday. It has not been an easy question to put to rest — obviously we realize that by not opening we may be put in a competitively disadvantaged position. Yet, we feel that there are too many reasons for not opening. Here they are:

1. It is illegal: despite the fact that the District Attorney chooses not to enforce the law (for sensible reasons) the law still exists. It seems to us that if we are to make sense to our children (and ourselves) about obeying the law, even when we don't happen to agree, there needs to be some consistency in what we preach.

2. This seemingly endless proliferation in store hours seeks to find advantage by increasing hours over those who don't. If carried to extreme stores could be open 168 hours a week. We don't think any more money is spent in total, but obviously the store that stays open more hours is aiming for a bigger portion of the pie.

3. We've said it many times before — we believe in a staff of first class people. We cannot expand our hours and expect to continue to attract that caliber of individual. We cannot work in shifts because the quality help we hope we have requires compensation at a high level.

4. Finally, this Sunday (and every Sunday) we want to rest, to play, to read, to watch football, to walk, to be with our families. We look forward to it all week — it's why we work the other six days.

UCCC Adult Survey

STONE RIDGE
Beginning this week about 70 Ulster County adults are now pounding the pavement and knocking on their neighbor's doors as part of a statewide survey to assess the educational needs and desires of area adults.

The survey, which will end Jan. 5, is the product of a joint effort of the State Educational Department and Cornell University. It is being coordinated on the local level by the Office for Continuing Education at Ulster County Community College (UCCC) in Stone Ridge.

According to Ronald A. Koster, associate dean for continuing education at UCCC, the project, once completed, will enable both state and local educational institutions to provide a wider range of responsive educational programs, based on the needs and wants of area residents, as expressed in the survey.

During the past five years while enrollments in four-year institutions has been on the decline, continuing education programs administered through local school districts, two- and four-year colleges, as well as BOCES programs have enjoyed unprecedented growth. Based on statistics computed by the State Educational Department in Albany, an ever-increasing number of adults are once more "hitting the books" in continuing education programs as a means of either improving job-related skills, or just as a recreational vehicle.

The survey is being conducted by randomly selecting individuals in local school districts and administering a 25- to 30-minute interview. Upon completion of the survey, it is estimated that nearly 35,000 New Yorkers will have been interviewed, about 700 of them in Ulster County.

The results from the survey are expected to be released sometime next spring, and it is hoped that local continuing education programs will be able to implement some of the short range recommendations by the following fall.

NW Nuclear Plants Of Major Concern

RICHLAND, Wash. (UPI) — Major concerns are surfacing in the Northwest over the rapid construction of a trio of large nuclear power plants on the once super-secret Hanford Atomic Reservation.

The Washington Public Power Supply System is building the plants to an ultimate generating capacity of 3.5 million kilowatts of electricity.

The benefits are obvious: thousands of additional jobs for Richland and its sister cities of Kennewick and Pasco, and a large quantity of power to help offset shortages expected in the Northwest in the coming years.

But there are serious questions regarding all aspects of nuclear energy, particularly the million-plus kilowatt reactors taking shape at Hanford and elsewhere in the country. "My feeling is that it's a system out of control," said Dr. John Sheppard, a Hanford scientist for nine years and now head of Washington State University's Radiation Isotope Lab.

"I'm not necessarily one to say stop, but there are still serious problems that have to do with whether there is enough uranium to keep them (reactors) going, and then the longer-term problems of radioactive waste, which are not settled by any means."

Sheppard said the industry should be moving slowly in development of large nuclear plants until such questions are answered.

Echoing Sheppard's concern is Dr. Eric Cheney, a geological sciences professor at the University of Washington. "Even if nuclear reactors were absolutely failsafe there are still the insurmountable problems of uranium reserves and waste storage," Cheney said.

He said world uranium supplies will last 90 to 100 years, yet nuclear reactors are generating waste problems that will last 700 to 500,000 years.

"How could the government guarantee storage that long? That sounds like they are talking about a nuclear priesthood that would make the CIA look like a bunch of school kids."

The concerns of experts like Sheppard and Cheney are not new. They go back more than 30 years when the federal government carved Hanford out of 570 square miles of sagebrush-covered desert along the Columbia River.

It was all part of the World War II Manhattan Project to produce nuclear weapons. Plutonium created in Hanford reactors fueled the first atomic bomb.

Only one of the nine plutonium-production reactors built during and after the war remains in operation today. The others were phased out in the late 1960s.

In their place are a host of nuclear-related projects, including a $622 million research breeder reactor being built for the government by Westinghouse Hanford Co., and the three WPPSS' projects.

One of them is scheduled to begin generating 1,100 megawatts of power in 1978 or 1979, and the other two, both rated at 1,250 megawatts, should be ready in the early 1980s.

Those in the industry say there is no way this type of reactor can blow up, and if the fuel core should overheat and melt — the worst thing they say could happen — a variety of safety systems would prevent any accidental release of dangerous radioactive fission products. Scientists also say that a number of optional processes and techniques are available for safe treatment, transport and storage of nuclear waste.

Because of the leakage of nearly 463,000 gallons of high-level radioactive waste from underground storage tanks at Hanford over a 17-year period, the government is well on the way to solidifying waste, but the containment program is only a short-term measure.

Sheppard said the entire waste storage problem is an "albatross around the government's neck" because, historically, most federal funds have gone into reactor development and not waste management.

Critics also point to government studies that report a major nuclear reactor accident could result in thousands of deaths and billions of dollars in property damage.

When the first WPPSS plant goes on the line near the end of this decade, it will produce about 20 tons of nuclear waste per year, according to Cheney.

Government officials say the spent fuel from the plant, like others, will likely be sent back East for reprocessing as soon as commercial facilities to handle that chore are completed.

Safely transporting radioactive waste from coast to coast becomes another challenge that those in the industry must deal with.

'Princess Alice' Still Holds Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alice Roosevelt Longworth at 91 is still holding court at late afternoon tea parties in her Massachusetts Avenue home, but she says she will now discuss only "happy things."

The daughter of Teddy Roosevelt and widow of Speaker Nicholas Longworth, "Princess Alice" lives alone in a dark mansion cluttered with mementos and memories of 85 years in the capital.

Among her aging possessions are her father's big game animal pelts, signed photographs of people straight from history books, and the widely quoted needlepoint pillow which says, "If you haven't got anything good to say about anyone, come sit by me."

Once the reigning "grande dame" of Washington, she has met every President from Benjamin Harrison to Richard Nixon, and her sharp, irreverent tongue has spared no one.

To her, Warren G. Harding was a "slob," Calvin Coolidge "looked as if he had been weaned on a pickle" and Thomas E. Dewey reminded her of "the little man on the wedding cake." She once referred to the present occupant of the White House as "poor, dull Ford."

Born on Long Island Feb. 12, 1884, Mrs. Longworth came to Washington when she was 6, and recalls that "no young person could have been more frivolous than I was."

As a young girl, when forbidden to smoke in the White House or anywhere else because it was unladylike, she would climb to the roof of the executive mansion to sit and smoke for hours.

"I can govern the country or govern Alice, but I can't govern both," her father said.

With the news of President McKinley's assassination and her father's succession to the presidency, Mrs. Longworth recalls she was overjoyed.

"I danced a little dance of happiness. I was never so pleased about anything. I didn't give a damn. Father wanted the White House. Father must have the White House."

When she was married in 1906 to Longworth, then a congressman from Ohio, it was considered the Washington social event of the century, despite the omission of bridesmaids and the use of a sword to cut the wedding cake.

She spent a lifetime surrounded by politics but never taking an active part. "I didn't want politics. I love it around me, but had no temptation to run for office. I was too shy," she said.

In the twilight of her years, Mrs. Longworth, thin, angular and energetic, still enjoys going to dinner parties or reading until 3 or 4 in the morning. She sleeps until noon and has company for tea every day at 5 o'clock.

But lately she refuses to discuss politics or current events. When asked in a recent conversation for her opinion of President Ford, his outspoken wife or New York City's financial difficulties, her reply was the same: "I don't know because I don't think about things like that anymore."

Postcard Boom Next Christmas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the price of a first class stamp about to jump to 13 cents after the holidays, the greeting card industry believes there could be a boom next year in postcard greetings.

The reason is obvious. A Christmas postcard next year could go for 10 cents, three cents less than the traditional card-and-envelope.

Only a few postcards are on the market so far from two big manufacturers and UNICEF, the United Nations organization that traditionally sells Christmas cards, says Harry Cooper of the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers. Cooper thinks greeting cards are a matter of tradition, based on the idea of confidentiality with a sealed envelope, especially when senders write messages on cards.

He said the first Christmas cards 90 years ago were postcards.

Meanwhile, the publishers' trade group favors legislation pending in Congress to freeze the first class rate at 10 cents for individual users.

Cooper said this could be accomplished by using a special stamp for personal mail. A severe penalty could be levied to discourage use of the 10-cent rate for other than personal purposes.

Otherwise, Cooper said, business in the greeting card industry appears to be good this year, recession or no.

A recent inquiry from a Floridian trying to keep snakes from her back yard prompted this from a reader in San Jose, Calif.: "While working at IBM . . . in Los Gatos, Calif., I noted a fence around the building and grounds. Since it was only one foot high I asked what it was for. They told me they had built the building on a snake run, where rattlesnakes migrate each year.

"They were finding them inside the buildings . . ."

"The solution . . . was a foot-high electrical fence . . . set to shock the snakes, but not kill them. Needless to say, they did not enter the area any more . . ."

"Thanks for the information. We don't know if a fence would be worth the investment for the average householder, but it might be worthwhile for anyone with a severe snake problem.

On the home canning front:

The Agriculture Department, noting that three million Americans tried home canning for the first time this fall, says now is the time to examine each jar closely.

"A bulge or leak means that the seal is broken, and the food has spoiled," the USDA said. Spoilage also is indicated by spurting liquid, off odor or mold when a jar is opened.

"Food that appears too soft or mushy may be spoiled. Even if it all looks well . . . never taste home-canned foods right out of the jar. Bring vegetables to a rolling boil, then cover and boil for at least 10 minutes. Boil meats and poultry, covered, for 20 minutes. Heating usually makes any odor of spoilage more evident."

Wants New Units

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commission on Civil Rights said today women and minorities still face discrimination in the housing market and called on Congress to authorize 600,000 new units of low and moderate-income housing annually until 1978.

"The effect of discrimination in housing has caused untold suffering for minorities and women, especially those at the lower end of the economic scale," the commission said in a 188-page report, "Twenty Years After Brown: Equal Opportunity in Housing."

Discrimination "has kept a much larger proportion of minorities and women from acquiring any but the worst housing available," the commission added.

It criticized both the president and Congress for abandoning the goals of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, which called for the production or rehabilitation of 6 million units of federally-subsidized by 1978.

In addition, it said the federal government had been "timid in its approach" to production of low cost housing and that federal agencies had failed to strongly enforce laws against housing discrimination.

The commission singled out the Justice Department in particular for failing to support "a metropolitan remedy" for segregation in central-city public housing.

"The position taken by the solicitor general indicates that the federal government is still unwilling to take effective action to promote residential desegregation," the report said.

The report on housing is the last in the commission's series reviewing the status of women and minorities 20 years after the landmark Supreme Court decision outlawing school desegregation, "Brown v. Board of Education." Other reports in the series covered economics, education and the historical background of the decision.

More dependable than a man.

Someday a handsome prince will ride up and carry you away.
Or maybe you don't see it that way.
Not that you've got anything against handsome princes. It's just that they're not very reliable.
That's why it's nice to know you've got some control over your future. Like being financially prepared for whatever lies ahead.
And one of the easiest ways to build future funds is with U.S. Savings Bonds. Buy them through your bank. Or join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.
Bonds are steady, solid, dependable. Just the kind of security a girl needs.
Then if your handsome prince does come along, so much the better.
You can always buy him a castle.

Now U.S. Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (or less the next year). Bonds are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. If a bonded day can be ended at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.

For Friday, Dec. 12, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let associates do your thinking for you today. If you have an idea how something should be done, pursue it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Let your better self rule your decisions today. Be helpful even toward those who have been unappreciative in the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A positive, outgoing attitude will serve you well to bring friends out of their doldrums today. Uplift them. Don't sink to their level.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your luck will carry you only so far today. Being considerate will earn gratitude for you and help out where Dame Fortune fails.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Opportunity is all around you today, although your attitude may be unduly pessimistic. Brighten up. Expect good things.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're in a good position to get your way today, but do it by praising, rather than by demeaning. Don't cause future resentment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today you read more into things than may actually exist. Take propositions for what they're worth.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Look beyond your nose today. Your outlook is too restricted. What looks good now may prove costly in the long run.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be wary of the grandiose schemes of others. Though they appear very impressive, take them with a grain of salt.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Avoid letting money burn a hole in your pocket today. If you have a little extra, put it aside for a rainy day. Don't waste it on a drizzle.

Your Birthday

Opportunities will fly at you thick and fast this coming year. Take advantage of those advanced by persons with ideals close to your own. Shun materialistic schemers.

Yesterday's article discussed the Herbert convention in which the next ranking suit is used as the negative response to a strong two bid. The convention is interesting, but it has the serious weakness that it gets you into lots of trouble when you want to make a positive response in the next ranking suit. We feel that this disadvantage overbalances its advantages.

Today's hand shows an example of a modification first suggested by Theodore Lightner in 1933 or '34. The Lightner variation provides that when you open with two, your partner makes a negative response, and you simply rebid to three of your own suit, partner may pass with a real blank.

We recommend the Lightner variation strongly provided that you understand it only applies when there is a negative response followed by a simple rebid of the first suit on a really hopeless hand.

Today's North hand is a good example. It really can't produce a part of a trick. He passes and South makes three spades.

In-Service Training

Back to the Money Tree

KINGSTON It's back to the money tree for city officials who had hoped the federal government would be willing to foot the bill for some $2.5 million worth of municipal construction projects last October. The city's application for funding under Title-10 of the 1965 Economic Development Act (EDA) has been rejected by federal officials. The city had asked for a million dollars for the restoration and rehabilitation of the old city hall, $750,000 for a new public works garage, $500,000 for a new fire station and $300,000 for a beautification program. Kingston officials weren't all that optimistic about getting the money, considering Kingston's per capita share of the $375 million is emergency funds would have been about $45,000 and that the object of the funding was to create "labor intensive" projects, something heavy construction doesn't provide. The Department of Commerce reported that there were nearly 10,000 eligible proposals totaling $3.5 billion but that only about 10 per cent were ultimately approved.

"We weren't really surprised," said City Planner Robert Pritchard who was given the bad but not unexpected news by Congressman Hamilton Fish's office on Monday. Mayor Francis R. Koenig was also philosophical about it, sending Pritchard back to the drawing board in search for more federal or state funding for those projects.

IBM Slates Transfer of 500

YORKTOWN HEIGHTS More than 500 employees of International Business Machines Corporation will be transferred from that company's System Communications Division facility in Westchester County to other Hudson Valley IBM plants.

Frank T. Carnella, director of IBM's Mohansic laboratory, announced that the move next year will mean employees will be sent with their respective projects to IBM locations in Kingston, Poughkeepsie, and White Plains.

The reason: "The transfer of laboratory programs and the closing of the Mohansic facility will improve operating efficiencies through consolidation of development activities," according to Carnella.

tions where their skills are in demand.

The movement of programs and personnel will begin in January and is scheduled to be completed by "the third quarter of 1976," said a news release. At that time, IBM's Real Estate and Construction Division will manage the Westchester Facility until it is either sold or another use is found.

In making the announcement, Carnella said, "Over the past 17 years IBM and its Mohansic employees have enjoyed a close association with the Town of Yorktown and its people." He emphasized that IBM's Thomas J. Watson Research Center, also in Yorktown, is unaffected by the announcement.

Victory Upheld

KINGSTON Supreme Court Justice Robert Williams has upheld Robert Mitchell's narrow victory over Ralph Hayner in the race for highway superintendent in the town of Ulster.

Williams, acting on a complaint brought by Republican Hayner reduced Democrat Mitchell's 10-vote margin to two votes. The case was heard last Friday and a decision rendered on Monday.

Hayner has not yet made a decision on whether to appeal Williams' ruling.

Glazer Unhappy With Contract

By Carl Graham ROSENDALE

Central Hudson wants a new street lighting contract with the Town of Rosendale—one that will include a fuel cost adjustment clause. Supervisor Richard Glazer is unhappy with the contract.

Glazer said at Wednesday night's town board meeting that the contract as it is written would be binding on the present town board and "its heirs and assigns," a legal phrase he says would bind all succeeding town boards.

Noting that the contract made no provision for termination by the town, although the utility has such a right, Glazer said: "I don't think the Public Service Commission has given Central Hudson the right to blackmail the town. I suggest we meet with them and negotiate this."

He said that the utility had notified the town that streetlights will be turned off if a new contract is not signed before March 1 to replace the January, 1971 pact now in force.

The board voted to set up a negotiation session with Central Hudson and to notify the town's three county legislators and the Public Service Commission of their action.

The board voted to create a seven-member town recreation commission, with Recreation Director Robert Strini as one of the members and chairman of the new group. No one was named to the new commission which will eventually have members serving seven year terms with one expiring each year.

The commission is charged with setting policies, "establishing and maintaining" parks, playgrounds and recreation areas, and spending funds budgeted for recreation by the town board.

Glazer said the move would enable the town to do year-round planning for recreation and to utilize to the fullest extent the town's recreation center at the former LaBonne Table site.

Responding to a letter from Stanley Nichols of Bloomington, the board noted that no action had been taken to grade the property on the east side of Route 32 in Bloomington on which Kingston contractor John Shults began work on a teaching center for Ulster County BOCES.

The board voted to meet with the town planning board for a study of possible new landfill sites. Councilman William Ritter said the present site would be filled in 5-10 years. Glazer, noting that a joint study commission for six towns and the City of Kingston had fallen through, said he thought the county should investigate a common landfill operation for the various towns.

In other action, the board: • Set a public hearing for the proposed town fire code for the town hall at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 17.

• Voted $50 to the Children's Christmas party put on by Rosendale firemen.

• Set its annual audit meeting for 7 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 29.

• Set its reorganizational meeting for 7:30 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 5.

• Praised retiring Councilman Karl Strobel for his 10 years of service with the town board.

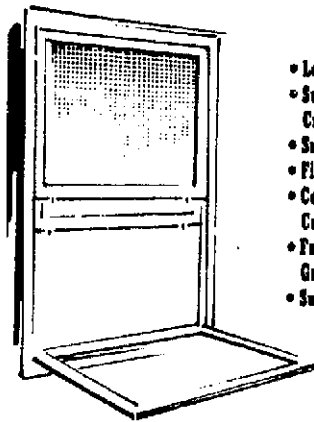

• Directed Building Inspector Otto Person to inspect all junkyards in the town.

Junkyard licenses come up for renewal Jan. 1.
